A Good Prescription, by Dr. H. Richard Harris, of Grace Church, Philadelphia.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsels of the ungodly nor standeth in the way of sinners nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." Dr. Harris said:

Presumably the man who wrote this psalm was not a physician. But at any rate he knew how to write a prescrip tion. He knew how to write it so that It should meet exactly the cases to which it applied. That is always the test of a good prescription, that it should meet not only one case, but a good many cases, or, in fact, all cases, it is not only a good prescription, but it is of inestimable worth.

That is the value of this simple prescription of which we are speaking. It is suited for universal application. It meets the needs of aft human hearts. No one but can take it and use it to his benefit. For look what it is. It is a prescription for happiness. What more universal need is there than that of happiness? Like physical health, everybody wants it and but very few have it. Anything that will insure it fills a want in the life of all men and

If we were told that in a certain dispensary in this city a remedy could be had which would infallibly restore everybody to health we should suspend all our business and other occupations and stand in line till we got it.

But we should make even a greater which would certainly cure us all of unhappiness and fill us with bright and lovous cheer. For we want to be happy even more than we want to be well. Thus we emphasize the need which what we want to know. Who is the happy man? Who is the man who lives in the sunshine and can smile in all kinds of weather? Tell me that, and tell me so that there can be no mistake about it. That will solve the problem of life and make it worth living. Well the psalmist tells us first that and not only tells us who is the happy man, but how we ourselves may be happy men and women. You have read his words a good many times and yet you never saw that in them, did you? But it is there. This is the secret key to complete and endless hap-

in this priceless prescription which makes it seem worth while to try it. It has quite a regular look, for it has that they all work in harmony. We wil look at the first ingredient. The happy man is he who has not walkthe counsel of the ungodly. The ungodly, of course, are those who live on the principle that there is nothing in life but just what they can see, or their wonds. hear and handle. Their counsel consequently is to live for the present moment and for themselves. Let a man look down on the hard, solid ground, they say, and make sure of all that he all he can get out of life, and to try for anything else only makes one mis-

Thus the ungodly reason because there is no place in their philosophy for stances, which I shall not take the piness as the result of this counsel of faith in any man or woman whom God the ungodly. Does anybody believe has made? that he is likely to reach true peace

Well, my friends, that is a good pic-ture of the kind of life which the un-godly must live. They live only in the dark, they work in the dark, they walk through the world in the dark. For it must be dark if there is no sunshine. And I would like to know where you are to get a ray of sunshine in this world if you shut God out of it. For when you say there is no God you say there is no heart in the universe.

John Stuart Mill saw ne God shin-ing upon the world and he thought it was the most cruel, monstrous, heartless world that any one can imagine. Without God there is no place for love, trust, hope, courage in this great scene of life. Can any one be happy who sees no love in the world, who knows of no one who can be trusted to do the best for every man? You know it is impossible. The counsel of the ungodly leads only to hardness of heart, to hopeless truggle, to final despair. No man can be happy who follows it. The prescription is correct. The happy man is the man who rejects that counsel. He lives in the sunshine of God's presence, he is cheered and comforted by the light from on high. He is the happy man, for he sees God and knows that God Second-Then we come to the second ingredient in the prescription for happiness. The happy man is the man who hath not stood in the way of sinners. What is the way of sinners? It is simply the way bad men have of doing things. It is not so much what they do as it is the way they have of doing it, which we have to bear in mind. Now it doesn't necessarily mean the way oriminals have of deing things. Criminals are not the only bad men in the world. I saw a fine tree last summer which a woodman was cutting down, and I expressed my sorrow that so noble a specimen must me destreyed. The woodman replied that it was a bad tree and had been growing worse for some years. But it looked all

The text was from Psalms 1:1: | right, so high and straight and branching and so green with leaves. But the man took a stick and thrust it in the side of the trunk and showed me that it had a bad heart and was a grow; ing danger in the grove. Is there any real happiness to be had from acting in such a way as to show that one loves what hurts and mars and disfigures life? Can a man or woman be really bright and cheerfull who uses his words, his talents, his opportunities to lower the tone of his own life and that of his fellowmen? What was it that darkened the genius of Lord Byron and spread a dark miasma over his poetry, and at last doomed him to the wild, restless, unhappy life which went out in gloem? It was the way of sinners in which affections have fastened on mean and selfish things. While the world was filled with the applause of his moetry he was plagued with such an abject misery of soul that suicide would have been a blessed relief. He attached himself to the worst in himself and others. Standing in the way of sinners, he found in it only darkness, despair and Again the old palmist is right. The happy man is never found in the way of sinners. Stop a hundred ordinary cople in the street today and ask them how much real joy and satisfaction and hapipness they have gotten from acting in a low minded, selfish and mor effort than that to get at a remedy ally harmful way, and if they speak sincerely they will all reply all, none at all." How can it be oth Cheer and happiness mean uplift of soul. How can a man's soul be uplifted when a bad heart is pullthe psalmist's prescription claims to ing it down? How can it enjoy the meet.

ish world, and sweetening all the springs of affection and action. Come up out of the way of sinners if you want happiness Third-But now let us look at the third ingredient in this invaluable prescription. The happy man is the man who hath not sat in the seat of the scornful. It is a sort of figurative expression. As of one who sits down up-First-Well, let us see what there is on a judgment seat to pass his opinion upon the men who are brought before him. As he sits there the look upon his face is not a look of sympathy three ingredients which are united so and good will. Men cannot expect to be judged impartially by this judge. He has his opinion of them beforehand, and whatever they may say or do he knows what to think of them. In a word, he does not believe in his fellow men, he has no faith in their motives What is the result? He will see no weakness, every man has his price. There is nothing in human nature that is worthy of respect, or which appeals can pick up with his hands. That is to anything but suspicion and contempt. That is the judgment seat of the scornful man, and there he sits sizing up his fellows as they pass before him. Well, the question is, does this sort of thing make the judge happy? a God. Come out of your selfish shell and see in others as good qualities as you seem to yourself to have, and learn how much they can add to your stores of good feeling. That is what the old prescription means. It means that happiness infallibly comes to the epch heart, the heart which keeps an open door, and a warm hearthstone, and a kindly welcome for others. Into that heart streams the beautiful sunlight of God's love, and sets it thrilling with cheer, comfort and gladness. While the scornful, suspicious, distrustful man shivers in the coldness and barrenness of his ewn hard soul the man after God's heart glows with the warmth and comfort of heaven. He loves what is best in human nature, delights to dwell upon it to search for it, to wait for it, to hope for it. And when he finds it. as he always does, his jey is the finest and highest which this world can know. Keep out of the judgment seat of the loveless, scornful man if you want to be happy. Thus, then, we have examined the old Hebrew prescription and have found it what we described it to be, exactly suited to meet

Prosecution Closes Its Evidence Against Reed Smoot.

WASHINGTON, March 9.-Several officials of the Mormon church today testified in the Smoot case before the senate committee on elections that they had plural wives and that they had centinued to practice polygamous cohabitation since the manifesto of 1890. Just before adjournment for the day the committee held an executive session for the purpose of having read the unprintable testimony in the Teasdale divorce case. The presecution stated that it had no more witnesses ready to put on the stand on account of the failure of several summoned officials of the Mormen church to appear. President Joseph F. Smith was asked to use his influence with the witheses and promised to get into communication with them if it was possible to do so. Lorman Harmer, formerly a bishop of the Morman church, today gave the first testimony in favor of the defense that has been offered thus far in the eight days of the hearings. He said he was convicted of the crime of adultery and that believed Reed Smoot was responsible for his arrest. The charge against good in them. ONLY RESULTS AFTER MONTHS OR YEARS OF NERVOUS EX-HAUSTON - THERE ARE AL-TIMELY WARNING.

It is a great mistake to imagine that persons of robust health and good vitality are suddenly seized with paralysis.

All nervous diseases are slow in coming on, and for this reason the victim often does not realize his danger until overtaken by prostration or paralysis. Loss of interest in life, sleeplessness, irritability, failure of memory, inability to concentrate the mind, muscular weakness, indigestion, headache, twitching of the nerves, feelings of depression and despondency are among the symptoms which tell of an exhausted nervous system and the approach of paralysis.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food stops the

The process of reconstruction is necessarily gradual, but you can be absolutely certain that every dose of Dr. Chese's Nerve Food is doing you lasting good.

It is your duty to study your symptoms and prevent the dreadful results of neglected nervous diseases. Mrs. S. Cole, Gibson, N. Though I tried several kinds of medicine I did not derive any benefit until I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Since I have used this preparation my nerves are strengthened, my digestion is good, the headaches are gone, and I can rest and sleep well. In fact, this treatment has benefitted my whole system
