The state of the control of the contro

mother, when I spoke to her about it afterwards, "just so sunny and kind, and ready all the time. I suppose there are more brilliant boys in the world than mine, but none with a kinder heart or a sweeter temper. I am sure of that."

And I thought, "Why ian't it adisposition worth cultivating? I sn't it one's duty to be pleasant, just as well as to be honest and truthful, or industrious experiences?" And yet, while there are a good many honest, truthful, industrious and generous souls in the world, and people who are unselfish, too, after a fashion, a person who is habitually pleasant is rather a rarity. But the beauty of it, as I said before, is that pleasantness is catching; and such people will find themselves in the midst of a world full of bright and happy people will find themselves in the midst of a world full of bright and happy people, where everyone is as good-natured and contented as they are.—Selected.

Henry Ward Beecher said: "It is not work that kills; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rust on the biade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction." Men seldom die of hard work. Bad methods of work; allowed work on the biaded work on the other days of the week, and the man who will not work during the week is as guilty as the man who will not rest on Sunday.—

There are few things in life more inexplicable and bewildering than the power which certain individuals seem to possess over others. We call it fascination, magnetism; but when we have spoken the name we are no nearer comprehending the reason for this spiritual authority that one person exercises over the othor than we were before. A man may be repugnant in character to all his friends, yet suddenly he meets a man, opposite in temperament and the very soul of honor, who trusts him and is strangely drawn to him, he knows not how or wby. We see wretched man, opposite in temperament and the very soul of honor, who trusts him and is strangely drawn to him, he knows not how or wby. We see wretched marriages, homes bishen up, because of this secret power, unseen, unfelt by all except the individuals interested. It is impossible to guide successfully our children's friendships. In nine cases out of ten the companions they choose, though we can state no objection to them, are different from those we would have chosen for them. The young girl that fascinates us is uninteresting to our daughter, who chooses a modest, dulappearing girl for her confidant and friend. All this being known and the old proverb that "human nature is weak!" being proven every hour, should we not be doubly careful of the society that our children meet? Daughters and cross may be devoted to their homes, they may be earnest and trustworthy, but while they are young, before the reflection of the tenderion going on each plate.

—Rev. W. A. Mason, Georgetown, P. E. I., writes: (lat letter) "I have see a good road will come to the reaching of the troubles.
