

low grade product, and no farmer should purchase feeds with which he is not familiar without a guarantee as to both the percentage of protein and fibre.

Sometimes weed seeds are included in these mixtures, and some weed seeds such as worm-seed mustard and other mustards, are decidedly injurious to stock. It is well, therefore, to exercise caution in purchasing these feeds and to insist upon guarantees as previously stated.

CONCLUSION.

As was stated in another place it is not possible to give exact comparisons of the relative feeding value of the various foodstuffs for all the purposes for which they may be required. All that has been attempted in this treatise is to give, in a somewhat crude but practical form, a few hints and suggestions regarding a number of feeds with which our farmers may come in contact, in the hope that such a presentation of the subject may be helpful in enabling the farmer to spend his money on feeds to better advantage.
