

:: FOREWORD ::

Offering this Calendar, I do so, hoping that many co-workers in this great fight for Justice and Liberty, may become better acquainted by seeing each others faces (if only on printed pages) and that some new inspiration and a wider sympathy may be found when we read of the different activities compiled herein. We realize that in our war-work and sorrows and "Tis good works that bind us closer."

In purchasing this Calendar you are helping our war work for our Northern men at the front, many of whom at the first call, left their homesteads, their all, in these remote districts to take up their share of the fight for you and me, who still toil on, steadfast in our endeavors to do our woman's part, and who are grateful to the many who have so nobly assisted in all our war work.

The picture on the front page is a view of the Peace River, where the Smoky joins its flow. On the right bank is the town of Peace River, so long isolated from the outside world, but now the gateway to the last great north.

There are many noble women of Canada, we know, whose good work we should like to record here but time will not permit, as the Calendar must be published in order to allow its use as a Christmas Gift.
