formed on Mt. Shishaldin (which had been quiet for two years), and a path of lava has been cut through the snow for several miles; and Mt. Pavlof, another volcano on one of the islands, is throwing out black ashes. This volcanic activity in the north is, by some, supposed to be connected with the present activity of Mt. Lassen, in California.

A new anesthesia has been discovered. After experimenting for five years, Dr. Fitzgerald, of St. Francis' Hospital, Hartford, Conn., claims to be able to perform dental and surgical operations painlessly, by simply exerting pressure "just short of pain" on the foot or the hand. The degree of pressure produces numbness, which gradually extends upwards the entire height of the body. When the numbness passes the location of the pain for which the anesthesia is being administered, the suffering ceases, and when the area to be operated upon by dentistry or minor surgery is reached by the numb wave, surgery may be instituted without pain. Writing of this new anesthesia, Dr. Smith, of Boston, says: "The most startling part of the Fitzgerald discoveries we have held back to mention last. He claims to have located about three hundred spots in the mouth, nose, throat and tongue, where pressure applied for a moment or two with the finger, or with a blunt probe wound with cotton, will produce anesthesia in some definite but remote portion of the body. He has mapped out his areas so far that he now includes the entire body." A curative influence is also claimed for this treatment, and cases of sore throat, bronchitis, and even of tuberculosis, are said to have been benefited by it.

The deplorable neglect of literature is largely due to the restless spirit of the age; but for the intervention of Sunday, crowds of young people would scarcely read a book from year's end to year's end."—Silas K. Hocking, in T. P's Weekly.

"There are now far more possible ways of rising (than in the past), but the standards are rising also, and high quality and hard work are more than ever essential. The spread of learning has had a democratic tendency. Those who are to have the prizes of life are chosen on their merits more than ever before. It must, however, always be borne in mind that character and integrity count in the market-place among these merits as well as do knowledge and ability. For the man who possesses both capacity and character, and who, having selected his path, sticks to his place of life undeviatingly, the chances of success seem to me to-day very great. But wisdom means more than attention to the gospel of getting on. Life will, at the end, seem a poor affair if the fruits of its exertions are to be no more than material acquisitions. From the cradle to the grave it is a course of development, and the development of quality as much as quantity ought to continue to the last. For it is in the quality of the whole, judged in all its proportions and in the outlook on the Eternal which has been gauged that the test of the highest success lies, the success that is greatest when the very greatness of its standards brings in its train a deep sense of humility."—"The Conduct of Life," by Lord Haldane.

A young lady sat next to a distinguished bishop at a church dinner. She was somewhat modest and diffident, and was rather awed by the bishop's presence. For some time she hesitated to speak to him, waiting for what she considered to be a favorable opportunity. Finally, seeing some bananas passed, she turned to him and said:

"I beg your pardon; but are you fond of bananas?"

The bishop was slightly deaf, and leaning forward, replied:

"What did you say?"

"I said," repeated the young lady, blushing, "are you fond of bananas?"

The bishop thought for a moment, and then said:

"If you want my honest opinion, I have always preferred the old-fashioned nightshirt."

HOW THEY OBSERVED.

"I think that children are not so observing as they used to be," said a member of the School Board to a teacher whose class he was visiting.

"I hadn't noticed it," replied the teacher.

"Well, I'll prove it to you," answered the Committeeman. Turning to the class, he said:

"Someone give me a number."

"Thirty-seven," said a little girl eagerly.

He wrote "73" on the board. Nothing was said.

"Well, someone else give me a number."

"Fifty-seven," said another child.

He wrote "75" on the board and smiled knowingly at the teacher when nothing was said.

He called for a third number, and fairly gasped at the indignation manifested by a small, red-faced urchin, who said: "Seventy-seven, and see if you can change that."

IT WORKED.

A young lady took down the receiver and discovered that the 'phone was in use. "I just put on a pan of beans for dinner," she heard one woman complacently informing another.

She hung up the receiver, and waited. Three times she waited, and then, exasperated, she broke into the conversation.

"Madam, I smell your beans burning," she announced crisply. A horrified scream greeted the remark, and the young lady was able to put in her call.
