Our British Letter

London, England.—The dockers' strike is still on. The government have attempted to settle the dispute and have made their proposals to both parties, but the employers have not only declined to accept the proposed settlement but have declared that they will not consider any terms until the men have returned to work. The strike leaders announce that the door is still open, and that they are willing to accept any honorable settlement. Meanwhile bread has gone up, foodstuffs and other goods carried by water are becoming dearer, and distress amongst those dependent on the strikers is fast increasing.

When Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence and Mrs. Pankhurst were sentenced to nine months' imprisonment in the second division, there was a great outcry on the part of their suffragist friends because they were not made first class misdemeanants. On Monday the Home Secretary stated in the House of Commons that he had been in communication with the judge who tried the case and that official had informed him that had the prisoners been willing to give an assurance not to use the larger liberty allowed in the first division in order to incite others to the commission of illegal acts, they would have been so placed by him. The Home Secretary further said he had now received such an assurance, and had advised that the three prisoners should be transferred to the first division.

Since the above was written Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Pankhurst have both been released from prison as a result of a successful "hunger strike" on their part. They refused to eat, and forcible feeding was attempted, but the result was that the women became ill and had to be removed to a private hospital.

English Woman Released by Czar
General satisfaction was experienced on Monday, when it was announced that Miss Malecka had been pardoned by the Czar on condition that she at once left Russia never to return. Many strong things have been said as to the treatment this lady has received, but moderate men will no doubt approve of Sir Edward Grey's words in answer to a question in the House of Commons on Tuesday. He said: "I am informed that the Emperor has ordered Miss Malecka's expulsion from Russia, as her conduct in some instances was undoubtedly such as no British subject has a right to pursue in a foreign country. I think that the action of the Emperor and of the Russian government should receive the fullest possible recognition, and will, I am sure, be appreciated as a generous and friendly act by the House. I trust it will also be recognized that British subjects residing abroad should not interfere in political questions in foreign countries."

England and Germany

Earl Loreburn, G.C.M.G., Lord High Chancellor, has this week resigned his office, and the King has appointed in his stead Lord Haldane, who thereby vacates the post of Minister of War, which in turn has been filled by the promotion of Colonel Seely, D.S.O., Under Secretary of State for War since 1910. The promotion of Lord Haldane causes some of the German papers to speculate as to what effect this will have on the recent efforts to come to an arrangement whereby England and Germany may diminish their naval expenditure. I am glad to learn through the Berlin correspondent of the Daily News and Leader, that the Mittags Zeitung, which is generally very well informed as to what goes on in high German quarters, repeats the statement that Baron Marshall von Bieberstein comes on a special mission in connection with this matter, but that the greatest secrecy is being observed; it adds that when this is accomplished he will probably return to Germany to replace Herr Bethman Hollweg as chancellor.

It is hoped here that Lord Haldane, who has made such drastic changes in our military system, may be equally energetic and successful in improving our antiquated and costly system of legal procedure. W. W.
