Other meetings will be held in the near future and committees will be appointed to look after the various phases of the work and a uglegation of practical men will visit upto-date opera houses in other towns to decide on the style of building required. It is the intention of the Institute to build the most commodious up-to-date structure that the funds at their disposal will permit. The building will be erected on the corner lot back of the railway station and will probably be ready for occupancy before this time next year.

One of the newest industries in Sussex is the manufacturing of steel ladders by the Acme Steel Ladder Co. There are several steel ladders on the market but those who have examined the Acme Ladder claim it the peer of them all. It is made in one foot links and is suitable for roof or wait. Tis advantage over the old style of steel ladder is that each link has a patented lock which holds the ladder perfectly rigid when the links are joined together. The Acme Ladder may be moved around as readily as a light wooden ladder and hence its superiority over all other link ladders as they buckle or twist around when one attempts to move them.

Some of the younger men of this town are advocating the organization of a basket ball league. Heavy Wheel Passes Over His Skull-Recovery Not Looked for CHATHAM, N. B., Nov. 16.— James halsson was badly injured today on the public wharf and little hope is held out for his recovery. He was assisting Harry Morris to load sacks of potatoes from a schooner at the wharf upor the latter's sloven. When the load was completed Morris was driving away. Chaisson made a rush at the teamster as a result of some remarks they had exchanged, but wholly in jest. Morris fell off the loaded sloven and oleared wheel, but Chaisson fell directly in front of one and before the horse could be stopped the hind wheel of heavily laden sloven passed over his skull, injuring him in a frightful manner. Blood spurted from his mouth as from a pump, and for a while he was thought dead. As speedily as possible he was removed to a hospital, where Dr. Loggie attended him.
