If, after Perrone, St. Quentin should be retaken by the French and English in their fierce offensive, the objectives in the line of advance, Cambrai would be one of the most important in the line of advance. This town, 121 miles by rail north-east of Paris, is the subject of the following war geography bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society from its headquarters in Washington.

“Twenty miles south-east of Arras and about the same distance north of St. Quentin, Cambrai, which had a population approaching 30,000 before the war, is one of the most interesting towns in Northern France. Situated on the right bank of the River Scheldt, at its juncture with the St. Quentin Canal, the city enjoyed considerable commercial prosperity on account of its soap works, sugar mills and textile factories. Its importance to France now, however, is sentimental rather than strategic.

“The event connected with Cambrai which commended it to woman-kind throughout the western world was the invention here, in the 15th century, of the fine linen fabric which takes its name from the town of Cambrie. The name of Baptist Cotton, the weaver who is supposed to have made the first Cambrai is perpetuated on the muslin called Baptist.

Military Allowance “One of the most formidable alliances of the middle ages was that which was effected here under the name of the League of Cambrai at the beginning of the sixteenth century. The members of the League were Pope Julius II., the Emperor Maximilian I., and the Kings of France and Spain. These four major powers brought together through the diplomacy of the Pope, had as their object the humbling of the great Republic of Venice. The avowed aim, having been achieved, the victors bestowed their spoils and the league soon ceased to exist.

“Cambrai is famous as the city where two royal women of magnificent power joined in a great diplomatic exchange of views resulting in the Peace of the Dames (Ladies' Peace), which brought to an end temporarily the destructive wars between Francis I. of France, and the Emperor Charles V. This treaty, signed in 1529, caused an abandonment of the plans for a duel to which Francis had challenged Charles as a means of settling their quarrel single-handed.

“The two women, who negotiated the treaty were Louise of Savoy, devoted mother of the French King, and Margaret of Austria, who had been the guardian of her nephew, the future emperor, during his youth, and whose long regency of the Netherlands was distinguished by firmness and energy. It was Louise upon whom he had conferred the title of 'Madame,' after ascending the throne, that Francis wrote his famous letter following his defeat and capture at Pavia in Italy. 'Of all things,' he said, 'nothing remains but honor and life, which is safe.' From this we have derived the familiar 'All is lost save honor.'

Captured by Spain. “In the closing years of the sixteenth century Cambrai was captured by the Spaniards, and it remained a part of the Flemish possessions of the southern kingdom for nearly 100 years, until Louis XIV. secured its return to France by the Treaty of Nimwegen. In 1793 the town successfully resisted the besieging forces of Austria, but it was not so happy in its resistance to the Duke of Wellington in 1815.

“Among the great names in French history which are associated with Cambrai are those of two churchmen, the scholar and the literary architect, Dubois, described by a vitriolic contemporary historian as a little pitiful, wizened man in a flaxen wig, with a weazel's face brightened by some intelligence, a man in whom all the vices—perfidy, avarice, debauchery, ambition, flattery—fought for the mastery. Despite this disagreeable picture, it is to be remembered that as the virtual ruler of France while serving as Private Secretary to the regent, Dubois gave his country a longed-for era of peace which would have been fraught with even greater benefits to us than the 'Mississippi Bubble,' which burst, precipitating the nation over the brink of financial ruin.

Enguerrand de Monstrelet, whose chronicles of medieval France begin where Froissart's end, also belongs in Cambrai's hall of fame.

Owing to the presence of a new powder factory, Barkdale Township, Wisconsin, will have $18,000 tax money to spend, the coming year, where hitherto the entire expenses of running the township government, road building and all, have not exceeded $5,000.
