

A Siege

The matrons of the Edison Orphanage at Lowell, Mass., U.S.A., were tired of a siege of whooping cough in their institution. They said that every case was promptly relieved by Vapo-Crescine. Its value in coughs and colds was so great they always kept it ready for use. You know how it's used, don't you? It's better by a vaporizer and you inhale it. Write us for a book that tells all about it.

Vapo-Crescine is sold by druggists everywhere. The Vapo-Crescine and Lungs, which would last a lifetime, and a bottle of Vapo-Crescine, $2.50; extra supply of Crescine in cans and cans. Illustrated booklet containing physicians' testimonials free upon request. VAPOR-CRESCINE CO., 150 Fulton St., New York, U.S.A.

IS NOW A RARE SPORT

SALMON FISHING IN CANADA SOON FOR MILLIONAIRES ONLY.

Big Prices Paid for Fishing Rights—Cascadia Salmon Club Pays Quebec $5,500 Per Annum, While J. J. Hill Pays $3,000 for the North Shore of the St. John—A Good Season.

A special correspondent of The Toronto Globe, writing from Quebec, says: The salmon fishing season closed on the 15th August, and all the reports from the rivers go to show that the sport during the season just ended was far ahead of what it has been for many years past, both in the Provinces of Quebec and New Brunswick. Those who failed of much success were generally the anglers who were too early in the season upon their rivers, like Mr. James J. Hill of St. Paul. The early disappearance of snow promised an early fishing season, and many salmon fishermen from Europe and the United States consequently went down to their rivers much earlier than usual, only to find that the continued heavy rains, consequent upon the heavy rains and low temperature prevented the possibility of fishing. Some of the anglers upon the streams of Labrador were three weeks upon the river without killing a single salmon. This was the case on the Moisie, one of the finest of the Canadian salmon rivers. Those who could afford the time to remain long enough upon the salmon pools got excellent sport, but many of the fishermen were obliged to leave when the fishing was just at its best. The Godbot, which belongs to Mr. Manuel of Ottawa and his friends, afforded, as usual, splendid sport, and so, the latter part of the season, did the neighboring river, the Trinity. For the first three weeks of their fishing the anglers on this stream only killed eleven fish, while in the four following days they killed 24. Mr. E. C. Fitch, President of the Waltham Watch Company, and a party of friends had good sport on the Romaine, while another party, including Mr. Robert E. Plumb, of Detroit and Mr. E. S. Hodges, of Boston, made a good kill on the Natashquan. This splendid river only costs the lessees $350 per annum, while for the St. John, on the north shore, Mr. J. J. Hill pays an annual rental of $3,000. The fishing of the Moisie was purchased from the landed proprietors last year for $30,000, and the Government fishing rights in the river and its tributaries cost nearly $4,000 a year besides. Amongst other distinguished Americans who fished Canada's north shore salmon streams this year may be mentioned the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, author of "The Recluse," "The Little Rivers," etc. He succeeded in killing nearly seventy salmon in the Riviere a la Truite.

On the south shore of the St. Lawrence the Cascadia Salmon Club pays no less than $8,500 per annum to the Government of Quebec for the lease of the fishing in only a part of the river. The Government of Quebec, Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Caldwell, Mr. de la Roche, Mr. Harry Hollins and other equally distinguished American anglers are members of this club. Any amount of this sport is offered by the splendid hotels of this river, though, on account of the usual clearness of the water, considerable skill is required to tempt the fish to rise to the fly. Some anglers fish but very little in the day time on this river, finding that the salmon rise more freely after sundown. They fish with a large light fly, and take the most of their light fly between 7.30 and 9.30 at night. Some of the best pools on the river are private property, including the famous Princess Pool, in which H. R. the Prince of Wales killed a monster salmon. This is no crowd, together with much more excellent fishing water, by Mr. Davis, of Rochester, N. Y., who has killed fish in the Cascadia weighing up to 52 pounds. The record fish taken with rod and line in Canadian waters was a salmon of 54 pounds, taken some years ago in the Cascadia by Mr. R. G. Dunn of New York. Formerly the Cascadia was fished by the Governors-General of Canada, by permission of the Government of Quebec, but the increased value of salmon fisheries led to its lease to American anglers. Lord Stanley built a fishing cottage near the mouth of the river, which has recently been sold to a Washington gentleman. The lodge built higher up the stream by the Marquis of Lorne is now owned by Mr. Davis. Mrs. Davis has probably more fish salmon to the credit of her rod than any other living fisherman. This year she killed nearly fifty fish, a number of which were over forty pounds each in weight. Dr. S. W. Mitchell is one of the regular anglers on the Cascadia, and to two other gentlemen who have fishing rights there belong the distinction of having killed the private library a copy of the first edition of Walton's "Complete Angler." For one of these the sum of $2,000 was paid. Of the remaining dozen or so of copies of this valuable little volume, now known to be in existence, two are in the library of the late Dean Sage of Albany, who died suddenly of apoplexy this summer while fishing at his camp at the junction of the Upper Sagadahoc and Restigouche rivers. It may be remembered that this gentleman was the author of a handsomely illustrated book on the Restigouche, much prized by collectors, of which only 105 copies were printed. The death of Mr. Sage recalls the fact that another prominent American angler was stricken with his fatal illness this summer while fishing on the Restigouche. This was the late Dean Hoffman of New York, in his life the richest clergyman in the world. He was taken ill at the club house of the Restigouche Salmon Club, at Matapedia Station, and died on board the special train on which he was being taken home. It was on a neighboring salmon stream, the Little Pahos, that the late Governor Russell of Massachusetts died sud-

GROUNDS OF THE "TERRIBLE."

The death is announced of First-Class Petty Officer Grounds, of H.M.S. "Terrible," the best shot with a heavy gun in the British Navy.

Grounds' wages were three shillings per day, and for the unparalleled achievement of making eight shots in one minute under most unfavorable weather conditions in 1902, he received in all the magnificent remuneration of 1 shilling 9 pence, and 6 shillings 3 pence, in the two years, "his proper share of prize money," London Globe.

The statement at the council, and the gunner at the breech, and the hand upon the parchment, and the O, the O, the waters—Have we weighed the word of each? Have we made a mandate stronger than ability to suffer?

He was the best with a heavy gun in the whole of the British fleet. And the run of his pay—Three shillings a day, with a bonus of three shillings a month, which he never lost. He was the man who could pick up a shell on a mark that was never still. Eight times he won the new and new Parliament whittled the bill. He was a man who could soothe a gun in the race of a sailing ship. Who could chime his shots with the changing knots of a ship with a dripping side.

Who could get his mark from a dancing deck that never a moment stood. Content to hunt for a Blaisy cheer, a midshipman's muttered, "Good."

Never his eye will steady now thro' the spray and the whistling rain. To look when the host of the foaming lips and splinter the mark in twain. Never again will he win his share in the prize of a sailing ship. Six and three in a single year, and once it was a one-and-a-half!

Never again will he find the last of the shells that the state allowed. He has turned from the rear of the six-inch gun to the front of the hammock shroud.

And never a bell in England tolled, and who was it caught his breath? When the shot of the Fleet dipped his feet in the flooding floor of Death!

Gladly, I think, would the gunner's soul have passed to the waiting dark. Had he known that he cared with patriot joy when the Navy hit the mark?
