HIS IMPRESSIONS.

Rev. Father Sinnett Gives Them of South Africa.

Not a Refugee He Would Very Much Like to Live Thro'—Among the Sick and Wounded

Rev. Father Sinnett, formerly of Ridgetown, one of the chaplains with the second Canadian contingent, writes the Ridgetown Dominion, describing his trip out there, and goes on as follows:

The city (Cape Town) stretches along the sea for several miles, forming villages as it proceeds, yet all in "Cape Town." I visited several villages. I first went to Rondebosch to see the sick and wounded, where 600 are in hospital tents. There we saw the bitter effects of war. There, while gazing upon the poor fellows, one cannot keep down the words, "Where are the authors of this cruel struggle?"

They are all asking they are at a distance enjoying life. How comes it that they who were so anxious for war are not to be found in the fighting lines nor in the hospitals, and yet the fighters are working out the ends of those who are in safety.

While among the sick of fever and wounds, I met the brave Canadian nurses. They are indeed heroes. When leaving Halifax many cheers for the brave boys, but I was given for the single cheer was given for the brave girls who were leaving home and country to tend with their loving hands and tender hearts the fallen. Yet, let it be recorded, if they were overworked at Halifax the brave boys in the field do not forget—they are deeply grateful.

At this village I visited Mr. Cecil Rhodes' home and residence, and I am not saying much when I assert that the gentleman has not forgotten the golden rule that "Charity begins at home." For he evidently has not neglected to make himself very comfortable.

A little incident occurred while at Rondebosch. Asking a well-dressed young man for a direction and informing him I was a stranger, he replied he also was a stranger. He said, "I am a refugee from the Transvaal."

I said, "You are a smart man. Here I am and many others have come thousands of miles to fight in your ranks, and you run away like a coward."

He simply said, "Sir, life is sweet. If you are those of whom you speak wish to fight, it is your own affair—good day," and off he went.

Now follow that man. As soon as the war is over he and thousands like him will go back to their homes in the Transvaal and rebuild a peaceful and happy life. He is a cunningest most provoking. Had I been a soldier I fear I would have given that youth a drubbing.

Vineburg is another small village. There I called upon the parish priest, Rev. Father Kelly, whose brother is vicar-general in the diocese of Kingston. There are many lovely buildings in this vicinity. The church, particularly, is a fine stone building.

I have just been informed from Col. Herchmer that we have been ordered to Victoria West, where the Dutch have broken out.

Victoria West, March 11. I broke off my letter somewhat abruptly some three days since. We reached here, 500 miles from Cape Town last night. Travelling was very difficult on account of the hills. These 500 miles are absolutely nothing but sand and rock—only in small patches is there any grass. Goats roam in large flocks and live on some weeds of a peculiar nature. Goat's milk in this country is under martial law. A few evenings since four of our soldiers guarding a bridge 100 miles north of this, were killed. From some of the hill tops one of our trains was fired upon.

At this writing even this section is very unsettled, what must it be where active work is going on? We are still at Victoria, a small station, with our horses tied head and hind leg under a blazing sun. Our next move we shall know to-night when Lord Roberts arrives. The Boers in Cape Colony promise to give trouble and the end is far from being in sight. Yours faithfully,
J. C. SINNETT.

THE WELL-SPENT DAY.
If we sit down at set of sun And count the things that we have done,
And counting find One self-denying act, one word That eased the heart of him who heard,
One glance most kind, That fell like sunshine where it went, Then we may count the day well spent.

But if through all the livelong day We've counted our heart by yea or nay; If through it all We've nothing done that we can trace That brought the sunshine to a face, No act most small That helped some soul and nothing lost, Then count that day as worse than lost.

Eczema on Leg from Knee to Toe. No Rest Day or Night. Doctors, Salves, etc., Could Not Cure.

CUTICURA REMEDIES CURED

About three years ago my husband's leg, from the knee down to his toes, were red and itching with Eczema. He had no rest day or night, and would scratch all the time, so his legs would bleed. He had a good many doctors. They told him there was nothing wrong with his blood, and they gave him salves and ointments to rub on. He had about a peck of bottles of good medicine, and he was not getting any better. He was so tired that he could not sleep, and he was so itched that he could not sit down. He was so tired that he could not sleep, and he was so itched that he could not sit down. He was so tired that he could not sleep, and he was so itched that he could not sit down.

RUBBER FROM INDIAN CORN

An Important Development Affecting the Rubber Trade

An important development affecting the rubber trade has been made by a company operating the principal glucose plants in the United States, viz.: the manufacture of a substitute for India rubber from corn oil. The company controls about 90 per cent. of the total output of glucose for domestic and foreign consumption, and from a statement issued on August 1, it appears that its several mills had consumed since August 15, 1897, 20,616,000 bushels of corn, from which were produced 542,100,000 pounds of glucose, 120,572,000 pounds of starch, 98,382,000 pounds of sugar, 2,600,000 pounds of dextrine, and 151,788,000 pounds of residue.

The number of by-products manufactured is forty. Among these is the manufacture of a substitute for rubber. It is not intended to entirely take the place of rubber, but it is to be used as a mixer. The manufacturers are now selling the product at 4-5 cents a pound, and the claim is made that rubber goods manufacturers, particularly those who make bicycle tires, are using it extensively. If its durability is proven, it is thought that the rubber trade will be revolutionized.

The rubber substitute is made from corn oil by a vulcanizing process, the product closely resembling Para rubber in appearance and quality. It can be used, according to the statement of the company, in the manufacture of all grades of rubber goods, including sheet rubber, bicycle tires, rubber boots, rubber soles, waterproofing, linoleum, etc. The fact that corn oil does not oxidize readily makes this product of great value, since it is also not affected by oxidation, so that the products manufactured from it will always remain pliable and will not crack as those made from other substitutes made from rape seed oil, linseed oil, etc. A mixture of 50 per cent. pure rubber and 50 per cent. substitute will, it is claimed, remain soft and pliable and will not crack.—Sept. Bulletin Bureau Am. Republics.

THE FORCE OF HABIT.

"Habit is a curious thing," said Mr. Jogginton. "but the completeness with which one habit can be supplanted by another seems more curious still."

"I had a chair that I had used for years, and which, as I was firmly convinced, was by long odds the most comfortable chair ever made. After breakfast, when I read the paper, I used to sit in that chair, and after dinner at night I settled down into it, with a cigar, in peace and happiness and thought there never was a chair that combined so many good points as to height and pitch of seat and slope of back, and all that; I had never seen a chair that suited me so well."

"But one day this chair was tipped over, or something or other happened to it—I don't know what—but something so serious that it was put out of commission. With our usual conservative slowness, we put off from day to day and from week to week repairing that chair, and, as a matter of fact, it was two or three years before we had it fixed up and brought into use again."

"I had singled out another chair which I came commonly to occupy. This didn't begin to be, at first, so comfortable as the old one had been, but gradually its objectionable points disappeared, and I blessed it if it didn't begin to develop good points, and I came at last to look upon it as a very comfortable sort of a chair, indeed. But at last the old chair, the good old chair, was fixed up again and brought back into use, and the day it appeared I looked forward to settling down in it at night with all the old-time comfort."

"But when, with all those pleasant anticipations I came to sit in it again I did not find the pleasure that I had expected; it was too high, or too low, or the seat sloped too much, or something or other was wrong; it wasn't what I used to be used to. I tried it once or twice more after that and then gave it up and went back to the new chair. My new habit had become firmly fixed. I liked the new chair better, and now, as I settled down in it, its good points were at once emphasized and softened, and rounded into completeness, and I accepted it in full as the chair of satisfying comfort, and wondered as I looked across at the other what I ever could have seen in it to make me like it so much."

"Such is the force of habit."
