More bread and Better bread —And the Reason for it

A STRONG FLOUR can only be made from strong wheat. Manitoba hard wheat is acknowledged the strongest in the world—and that is the kind used for Purity Flour.

But that's not all. Every grain of this wheat contains both high-grade and low-grade properties. In separating the high-grade parts from the low-grade, the Western Canada Flour Mills get the hard wheat through a process extracting that not a single low-grade part has the remotest chance of getting in with the high-grade.

Of course this special process is more expensive to operate but it means a lot to Purity Flour users—that's why we use it.

It means that Purity Flour is made entirely of the highest-grade flour parts of the strongest wheat in the world.

It means a high-class, strong flour and therefore yields "more bread and better bread."

Purity may cost a little more than some flours, but results prove it the cheapest and most economical after all.

Wonderful.

Isn't it wonderful when you think,
How the creeping grasses grow, High on the mountain's rocky brink, In the valley down below?
A common thing is a grass-blade small, Crushed by the feet that pass, But all the dwarfs and giants tall, Working till to-morrow shadows fall, Can't make a blade of grass.

Isn't it wonderful when you think,
How a little seed adorns, Out of the earth new life will drink,
And carefully upward creep?
A seed, we say, is a simple thing,
The germ of a flower or weed,
But all the earth's workmen laboring,
With all the help that wealth could bring,
Never could make a weed.

Isn't it wonderful when you think,
How the wild bird sings his song, Weaving melodies, like by fair,
The sweetest of the world?
Compassion is a bird, always,
Everywhere seen and heard,
But all the earth's workmen laboring,
Working on till Judgment day, Never could make a bird.

A Prophet in Babylon.

BY W. J. DAWSON.
AN INTERVIEW.

'Isn't it early to ask that?'
'Not at all. Do you know what everyone in New York is asking today? They are asking, "In this man a dreamer or a man of action?" O, I know that to be capable of great dreams is the noblest distinction in the world—all great men have been dreamers who have dreamed true. But the men who have really moved the world have been men who knew how to make their dreams come true. I need not give you instances—I can easily supply them—but I suppose Loyola is as striking as any. He had his dream, and as long as he lived in his dream, he was stoned out of every city he entered, and was regarded as a madman. Then he came down to practical details, organized an order, bent the whole force of his character to the task and before he died had conquered the world. My friend, you have to organize. Keep your dream—Loyola kept it; you are worth nothing without it. But make haste to give it practical form, for the world will only listen to the dreamer when he speaks with authority, and condescends to details.'

all I've said," said Gaunt in some alarm.

'Well, not all; just enough for present purposes. Do you know, sir, that there's a whole month to be bridged over before your appearance in Madison Square Gardens? A month is a long time in the memory of New York—time enough for the greatest man to be forgotten. Now I don't propose that you will be forgotten.
Remember! I don't claim to be a religious man, and please don't consider me your badge when you invent it. I am merely an editor whose work it is to interpret the ideas of the world, and to get before the public the best of the business of the day. I don't care for the religious part of it, but I'll say that if I formulate a religion for myself again, it will be on your model. But that's neither here nor there. I am going to take up your cause because I believe that the mind and conscience of the world is ripe for it. I am only anxious on one point—and you know what that is. Get your whole plan into working order as fast as you can, so that when not a couple of hundred people through telegrams and letters, but twenty thousand people with the living voice ask you in Madison Square Gardens, "What would'st thou have us to do?" you may know how to answer them with the categorical imperative.'

THE HOUSE OF JOY.

THE plan of living in Washington Square was, as Gaunt had said, due to the practical intelligence of his wife.
For her own part, she was willing as her husband to live in the barest rooms in the poorest quarter of the city. The less they spent the more would they have to give, was her prudent principle. But as the new movement outlined itself before her with increasing distinctness, she perceived that it probably would embrace all classes. Of course the movement must go to the poor first. She heartily believed in the principle that all great religious movements began with the poor. But they do not stay there.
Besides, the very conception of a League of Service implied bringing the rich into contact with the poor.
It meant the mobilization of wealth in the service of poverty, of culture in the service of ignorance. Therefore the location of the movement must be central, and for that reason she insisted on Madison Square Gardens. For the same reason, she was not in two provinces, but served as thought of Washington Square for her own home. It was the most central location in New York, and it was close enough to the poor to retain the idea that the first object of the movement was for their benefit.
Here Palmer came to her aid in an unexpected fashion. He and his wife had long lived in Washington Square, attracted by the old-fashioned spaciousness of its houses, from which fashion had long since departed. The one luxury they allowed themselves was a house with large rooms: In every other respect their life was as simple as a life in a log-cabin. They had never furnished the upper part of the house, and had retained many tempting offers to let it for office purposes. It now occurred to them that the house might be easily adapted for the purposes of the League.
They both hailed with delight the idea of Gaunt's coming to live with them. From that idea there was evolved the larger idea of something in the nature of community life.
Palmer was one of those gentle and reserved women, who endure loneliness of life without complaint, but who are all the time looking for some object which can give a larger interest to their thoughts. She had long ago given up all visions of marriage; she lived for her brother. But there were many hours in each day when she was alone, and she felt the lack of some positive exciting duty.
