CARD.
Miss Layton takes this means of cordially thanking her many friends for the public generally for the hearty support that she has received from the opening of the Newcastle Book Store. She wishes to say that she will receive the same and more heartily than ever. She will receive the same and more heartily than ever. She will receive the same and more heartily than ever. She will receive the same and more heartily than ever.
Miss Layton finds herself in a peculiarly fortunate position to sell goods at very low rates, using moderate expenses. She intends to "pull in her own cards" and shall endeavor to meet the approval of all customers, hence she appeals to the people of this town and vicinity to further aid her in the effort to make the Newcastle Book Store an emporium, at which goods of a superior class may be purchased at reasonable prices.
While adding to her stock continually she announces with regret that her little store is full of the many things that are to be found in a well equipped book store. Among others just received are: Books of Prayer and Praise for all kinds of churches and denominations. Books of Standard Literature and all the latest Novels, Papers and Serials to no end, last stands, Pens and Pencils and lots of other articles too numerous to particularize. To send up the subscriber hopes attention to the wants of her customers and a steady eye on prices to do the Book and Stationery business of this town and vicinity.
Thinking the good people once more for their kind support she begs to remain

Jolly Old Uncle Josh!
His Great Generosity Towards His Newly Married Niece.

A Reliable Romance of Newcastle, in Which a Number of Prominent Business Men Take a Very Conspicuous Part.

(Copyright 1897, by W. S. Galt.)
"Miss Summers—Polly—I—er—dare I— But the speaker took a header over his shoulders only to hear a sweet—
"Yes, Charley."
"Can I aspire to—er—to—that—is" Again a lapse into silence, followed by an encouraging,
"Yes, Charley."

"Oh, if I might only hope to er—to—Another failure of language. It was seemingly a hopeless case, and might have been, only for a demure—Charley, I have said 'yes' twice, and if you mean it, I mean it, too, and—
And to this day that young man will insist that he popped the question.
All this happened away 'out west' and it wasn't long before there was a wedding not much longer before there came a letter from Polly's Uncle Josh down in charge and he led the party straightway to a hotel. "The Waverley," said he, "is a typical New Brunswick hotel of the last class. I have known John McKee the proprietor, for years and he is mine host after mine own heart, endowed with that delightful intuition that makes a guest feel at home, contented, and in mighty good luck. The house is one of convenience; the apartments are well furnished and the cuisine excellent.
I have engaged rooms here until your own house is in readiness." With these words Uncle Josh graciously presented to Charles the deed of a cozy cottage.
"After breakfast," said the old man, "I am ready to go and buy your outfit. To expedite matters I have ordered a carriage from Dennis Doyle our enterprising livery man." When the handsome carriage, with elaborate trappings and prancing horses drew up in front of the hotel Polly declared it the finest turnout she had ever seen. "Yes Sirs," replied Uncle Josh, "the three S's, Speed, Safety and Style is Doyle's coat of arms. So, young folks, when you want to take a ride either for business pleasure or go to him for a rig every time." His wedding and party equipments were unsurpassed.
"Having provided you with a cage for the birds," said Uncle Josh, "now the first thing we'll look after will be the furnishings for it." Hereupon, Polly enquired if he declared that she had heard so much about John Morrison's nice furniture that he had decided to go there. The result was that they were thundered into such a bewildering display that the girl was at first at a loss how to select. But she soon yielded to the enthusiasm of her friends and selected a bed room set in oak, antique finish, that would do credit to old Andrew himself. Then she added a dining-room set with all accessories, an easy rocker for Uncle Josh, and didn't forget a most convenient and ornamental writing desk for Harry's Charles."

"A pretty good start," said the old man, and now we'll go to J. H. Phinney big tin store store. Here, Polly's bewildering instincts had full play in marvels of kitchen apparatus. "There is not an establishment in the country that carries a more comprehensive stock of household furnishings," remarked Uncle Josh.
"Every possible piece of kitchen furniture from a tin dipper to a cooking range is here in all styles and variety." If Polly failed to convince wonders in the culinary art, it will not be for want of superior cooking utensils, for she purchased a Garland cook stove with all equipments needed in a well regulated kitchen.
While Uncle Josh paid the whole bill with delight because he knew Mr.
Phinney had treated him right.

"Harry," commanded Uncle Josh, as the party came in front of H. D. Peters' handsome drug store, "Walk right in."
"Why Uncle," were not sick, and—"Guess I know that, but I suspect it won't be long before this young man begins to take an interest in matters of purgative and—" "U-n-c-l-e!" "Well, go in anyway," Polly may find some toilet articles she wants." Sure enough, before leaving she was loaded down with combs, brushes, face powders, and once upon once of fine imported perfumes.
"Don't forget," added Uncle Josh, "to come here with your perceptions, as I rest the styles and prices offered by Mc-Millan.

"Oh, say, Uncle," exclaimed Polly, as they halted before a show window, "what a perfectly lovely slipper!" "Yes," said Uncle Josh, M. H. McMillan's stock can't be equalled in style and extent in this section. Go in, look it over and get acquainted." It might have been policy not to have extended that invitation, had not Uncle Josh known what wise economy it is to trade at McMillan's, for Polly found goods and prices so seducive that she purchased an outfit from a satin slipper to a handsome walking boot. Charley invested in gent's fine shoes, while Uncle Josh indulged in a stout farm boot, with rubbers for the crowd. No one needing footwear can

acquainted." It might have been policy
not to have extended that invitation, had
resist the styles and prices offered by Mc-Millan.
