and thus addressed her neigbour, who was hanging out her week's washing : "A family has moved into the empty house across the way, Mrs. Clothesiine." "Yes, I know." "Did you notice their furniture ?" "Not particularly." "Two loads, and I wouldn't give a dollar a load for it. Carpets ! I wouldn't put 'em down in my kitchen. And the children ! I won't allow mine to associate with 'em, you bet. And the mother ? She looks as if she had never known a day's happiness. The father drinks, I expect. Too bad that such people should come into this neighbourhood, I wonder who they are? "I know them."

"Do you? Well, I declare. Who are they?"

"The mother is my sister, and the father is the superintendent of the Sunday-school." A painful parse ensues.

"We have $2,000 in cash in the safe, the stock is all run down, and this would be the bime to fail in business." "It certainly would." "But I want a reasonable apology to give my creditors when they come down upon us for explanations. See if you can't think of compthing to night and lat me know in the tor explanations. See if you can't think of something to-night, and let me know in the moming? The clerk promised, and the grocer wheeled a chest of twa and a bag of coffee home as a be-pinning. Next morning when he appeared at the store the safe was open, the cash gone, and on the desk was a note from the clerk, reading:

"I have taken the $2,000 and am prepared to skip. It will be the best excuse in the world for your failing so flat that creditors pan't realize two cents on the dollar."

Each One Had An Excuse.

Each One Had An Excuse. The other day a temperate Brooklyn man concluded he would take a drink, and went into a saloou. To his horror he met a friend at the bar who was also the kind of a man who "never touches liquor, sir." Each felt a little better, however, when he divined the reason of the other's presence. Just as they said "good morning" and were sliding up to the buy, a third party of similar abstemious pretensions came in, and would have backed out but the others saw him.

when a served out out the others saw him.
"Ah-sh-matlemen, will you take some-thing?" said number one, "The fact is, I suffered all night with a terrible cold. It was simply terrible; I thought I'd take some-thing to warm me up."
"Mumber two hesitated a moment and then said: "Well, I don't care if I do, My rheumatism has been hurting me awfully for a week. I believe I'll join you."
Them there coughed and then path his hands on his side, then hesitated a moment hands on his side, then hesitated a moment hand son his side, then hesitated a moment hand son his side. The hesitated a moment hand son his side, then hesitated a moment hand son his side. The hesitated a moment hand son his side. The hesitated a moment harding walk." hardly walk."

Re Had Set His Heart on a Suit for Dam-ages. A lawyer across the Hudson received a sall the other day from a man who wanted to begin a suit against a railroad company. He claimed to have been run over by a hand-car, but close questioning revealed the fact that the car was in possession of a gang of boys.

that the car was in possession of a gang of boys. "I'm atraid we could not hold the com-pany responsible," said the lawyor when he had all the particulars. "But the company owns the track and the hand-car," protested the man. "Yee, but that won't do you any good. Are you anxious for a suit?" "Well, I've rather set my heart on one," "Let's see. Did you go to war?" "No."

"No." "Have you any relatives there !" "I had a brother living in Virginia when the war broke out." "Good ! He owned a farm and the Union broops occupied it and damaged him to the extent of $12,000. We consequently file a sleim against the Government for that sum and interest. Don't say another word abont meing a railroad company-we've got a better thing."

"But my brother inn't dead." "Then go and kill him at once. We've ot a dead sure thing on Uncle Sam, and ifles must not be allowed to stand in the by. Please kill him so as to be back by ar o'clock to swear to the claim."
