GILLETTS LYE

THE

Grand Alliance;

Love That Knew No Bounds.

CHAPTER XXXI.

"Why, to be sure they are!" answered the major, uncommonly relieved that the murder was out, "and as this has got wind just as I said it would, I shall urge my sister-in-law to take off her preposterous veto on the poor child corresponding frankly with us all. If I knew where she was stowed away I should be tempted to let it out now. But I don't; for—with a vexed frown, which Richard Drayton fancied he could interpret ardent Mr. Rupert—"she will have nothing to do with me now! But if you should chance on Mrs. Alwyn over yonder, ask her about Sydney yourself!"

"Small likelihood of that," returned Richard Drayton—"my business will not carry me into ladies' company. But such as it is I must be off after it. I've only time to get my portmanteau from the Langham and catch the seven-twenty train from Victoria;" and with genial farewell from the major and a bow from Mr. Villiers, who was talking now with some ladies at a little distance, he was soon out of the park, and en route for his first stage toward searching out his old slandering among the stums of Paris.

"MY KIDNEYS HURT ME ALL THE TIME"

Gin Pills Cured Them. Free Sample Box Leads to Cure.

Only those who have been tortured with Kidney Trouble can appreciate how Mr. Trumper suffered. Being a railroad man, he was called upon to do all kinds of heavy work. The constant strain of lifting, weakened the kidneys.

I received the sample box of Gin Pills and was greatly benefited by them. My kidneys were in such bad condition I could not lift or stoop without pain. In fact, they pained me nearly all the time. I have taken three boxes of Gin Pills, working all the time at heavy work on the railroad and did not lose a day.

you desire him sooner?—then any morning at his recently engaged apartment on the Boulevard de Malesherbes, or in the earlier evening at Nombres-d'huit, Avenue Bois de Boulogne, where he now spends much time. He is clever, very, this your compatriot. He evades us yet. But if you will his detention under these"—touching documents just shown him—"you shall be immediately accompanied to that purpose."

Richard Drayton deliberated. Once his own name was cleared he hardly desired to push the man to this extremity. He would give him another chance. Try other means first. Thanking the civil official, then, and arranging for further communication if needful, he bent his course toward the well-known Boulevard de Malesherbes, and requested of the concierge one of its best appointed dwellings an interview with Mr. Thompson under his latest Parisian pseudonym.

But "monsieur was not within. He had arisen but to set forth and make visits. The hour of his return was totally uncertain."

On, therefore, to the Avenue Bois de Boulogne went Mr. Drayton, trusting, though with some wonderment, to come, in that well-inhabited locality, upon his gentleman with his intimates for the time being.

But at number eighteen he was also too late. An active-minded attendant was "bien chagrine, but le Monsieur Anglais was but just departed to drive with his friends to Longchamps. He would be returned only at the hour to dine in the evening."

Allowing seven as the hour to dine, Richard Drayton put away the time impatiently till eight, then presented himself once more at the balcony, flower-garnished little mansion, requested to be announced merely as a gentleman from England, and speculating much on what species of company he was entering, found himself after traversing a spacious gilded corridor, in a brilliant, decorated salon, and in the presence of Mrs. Alwyn, Miss Villiers, and Mr. Morecombe-Wood!

The ladies were in charming costly evening toilet. Mrs. Alwyn's satin draperies enveloped her velvet fauve!; Leonora, in pearly silk and muslin, with a semi-cuirass of myosotis, was looking up with rapt attention at her masculine companion. He, in immaculate dinner costume, seemed whispering soft speeches for her ear alone. All three showed visible amazement—no fraction greater than what he felt!—at Richard Drayton's appearance. In one of the trio a flash of something like fear showed at the back of this surprise. "This is an unexpected—call," said Mrs. Alwyn, rising, ceremonious interrogation in her aspect. "You bring no ill news, I trust?"

WOMAN COULD HARDLY STAND

Because of Terrible Backache. Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I suffered from displacement and inflammation, and had such pains in my sides, and terrible backache so that I could hardly stand. I took six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I can do any amount of work, sleep good, eat good, and don't have a bit of trouble. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to every suffering woman."—Mrs. HARRY FISHER, 1642 Juniata Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Woman's Case.—Providence, R. I.—"I cannot speak too highly of your Vegetable Compound as it has done wonders for me and I would not be without it. I had a displacement, bearing down, and backache, until I could hardly stand and was thoroughly run down when I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helped me and I am in the best of health at present. I work in a factory all day long besides doing my housework so you can see what it has done for me. I give you permission to publish my name and I speak of your Vegetable Compound to many of my friends."—Mrs. ABRIEL LAWSON, 126 Lippitt St., Providence, R. I.

Danger Signals to Women are what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness, and the blues. In many cases they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, which may be overcome by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

"As you will," answered Mr. Richard Drayton. "But having come thus far to meet you, and being in haste to get back to England, perhaps Mrs. Alwyn will permit me to wait here till you can spare me five minutes?" and he took a chair close to the door, sitting there through a minute of embarrassment to all, broken by his hostess asking if he was particularly occupied in England, that he must return thither so quickly from this enchanting city.

"I fear, Mrs. Alwyn, I don't find Paris half so enchanting as the village you left," was the blunt reply to this. "At any rate, it is to St. Clair I have gone to look for a wife."

"And found one?" cried the lady, suspicion aflame again.

"Actually in that remote corner of the earth," said Leonora, pityingly—the French capital was her Paradise. St. Clair, in reminiscence—well, exactly the reverse. "You must be easily contented, Mr. Drayton!"

"Indeed I am not. I could find no match to Miss Dacie elsewhere, I assure you. For I have followed Dr. Primrose's advice, and chosen my wife as she would choose her gown—to wear well!"

"Miss Dacie!" repeated Leonora, with an infection of amused patronage; "actually to be married! and you say Dr. Primrose advised it? Is he a medical man you both knew, then?"

Mrs. Alwyn tapped the floor impatiently. Sometimes her dearest Leonora was provokingly stupid. She was so now. What would that well-read Mr. Morecombe-Wood think? She need not have disturbed herself. The well-read gentleman had enough else to think of in those seconds to let his fair lady's pretty ignorance pass unheeded.

"Drayton," he said, getting up armed with a resolution to take the bull by the horns, "Mrs. Alwyn will permit me the use of her salle a manger, I am sure. We had best dispose of what brings you here at once." Richard Drayton was on his feet instantly, still in front of the door. Unearthing his quarry where he had, put him in a bit of a daze, but one idea he kept well in sight. Having found the fellow, he must not let him go till what he wanted was secured.

"We can dispose of it without so much as leaving the room," he answered, "Mrs. Alwyn giving us leave to talk ten minutes by yonder writing-table."

"My room is at your service, Mr. Morecombe-Wood," said the lady—"Leonora, love," as the two men moved off the length of the apartment, "read me Galignani's London letter, will you?" And to that distant accompaniment Leonora's lover wound up accounts with him whom he had nearly made his scapegoat years before.

His cavalier air changed to one of lynx-like anxiety; he watched while, without a single word, letters from one Senor Jose de Souza of San Nicolas, detailing certain sums unlawfully abstracted from his possession by a Francis Travers, a telegraphed order for the arrest of this Travers, if necessary, and a second telegram giving entire power to deal with the matter to Richard Drayton, were laid before him.

His quick wit caught at the saving clause, "if necessary." He put his fingers on the syllables. "What buys me off?" he asked, in the lowest audible voice.

"This," replied Richard Drayton, unfolding a sheet of letter-paper, on which was set forth clearly a recantation of the tissue of lies told by Francis Travers to stain his colleague's character at their Brazilian post.

"At this distance of time and place, for sums insignificant to him, Senor de Souza has no special desire to prosecute you."

"Chut, chut!"

"If I am contented so will he be."

"Give me a pen!" whispered Mr. Morecombe-Wood, with the harsh, hard breathing of a man at bay. "There!" seizing a slender gilded toy of Leonora's, and dashing off a shaky "Francis Travers"—"that's soon done, and upon my honor" (an oath with poor enough backbone) "I'm glad to do it, Drayton. You can't tell what I was put to out with the De Souzas. But I've often felt in an awfully low way over it. I never did a trick of the sort before or since. You are satisfied? You'll go now? You won't let out upon a fellow?" This in rapid, feverishly eager undertone, his evil, calculating face well kept from the ladies' sight. "You'll cry quits if you're as generous as you used to be."

Even with his precious draft safe, Richard Drayton hesitated, knowing the man a liar, whose mere acquaintance boded ill to Mrs. Alwyn and her daughter. While he demurred, Miss Villiers flung down her paper, crying out,

"Oh, Travers, Travers! A horrible bee is on my arm! It will sting me.

Oh, here, here, what shall I do?"

"Confound—the bee!" said Mr. Morecombe-Wood, sotto voce; but he had gone to her assistance, while Mrs. Alwyn, sailing down on Mr. Drayton, made motherly excuse for the familiar appeal.
