can soldiers has been torpedoed and sunk off the Irish coast, and at a late hour to-night 1,912 officers and men had been accounted for, in a despatch to the State Department from London. News of the first great disaster in the war to American armed forces came in a brief despatch to the War Department. It didn't mention the possibility of further survivors, but the hope was built here on the fact that all of those rescued were landed at two widely separated Irish ports and gave indications that relief ships were at hand quickly. Soldiers on board the Tuscany were small detachments from almost every section of the country. There was no distinctive military unit from any State, and for this reason the War Department announced it would be impossible to give the list of those aboard until complete reports had been received. Instructions were sent by wireless and cable by the War, Navy and State Departments to their representatives in England and Ireland directing that every detail be forwarded at the earliest possible moment.
