SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

A HARD THING TO DO.

Is there anyone in all your list of acquaintances who you feel sure does not like you and yet whom you like, or at least respect and admire?

It seems to me that every such person whom you can point to is a star in the crown of self conquest.

Like People With Good Judgment.

It is a very easy thing to like anyone who likes you. (Do not even the publicans the same?) Nothing is a better recommendation to liking—neither wit, nor character, nor position, nor talent, nor a sweet disposition—than the fact that some person has shown the good judgment to like you.

"We are thankful for good will rather than service," says the cynical Hazlitt. "And those who esteem us or evidence a partiality for us are still those whom we consider our best friends."

And again "True friendship is self love at second hand where, as in a flattering mirror, we may see our virtues magnified and our errors softened, and where we may fancy our opinion of ourselves confirmed by an impartial or faithful witness. . . . Nay so strong is this feeling that we extend it even to those counterfeits in friendship, flatters and sycophants. Our self love rather than our self interest is the master key to our affections."

Your First Reaction!

If you doubt this, notice next time someone whom you have considered your friend and felt sure admires you shows signs of disapproving of you and see what your reaction is. See if you aren't inclined to wonder if you haven't overrated him or her, given him credit for better judgment than he really possesses?

To like a person who plainly does not understand or appreciate oneself is an achievement in character. It means that one has been able to disentangle one's emotions and one's opinions. And anyone who can do that has passed an important milestone on the road of self conquest.

"I Can See What He Dislikes in Me."

It means also that one has achieved a certain height of tolerance. One says in effect either "This person has not had a chance to understand me, if he did he would feel differently," or "my good points are not the kind that appeal to him, but that does not prevent his being a perfectly good person" or even, "I can see what he dislikes about me. I don't blame him."

Of course it is not likely that there will be any great warmth in one's feelings toward such a person. But that is expecting too much of human nature. If we can keep ourselves from disliking one such person that's something. If we can approve and admire, that's something more; and if we can feel even a lukewarm liking, that's considerable. Maybe in our next stage of existence we shall be able to really love people who dislike us. And yet if it is an advanced stage who is going to do the disliking? Rather a poser, isn't it?

Household Notes.

To prepare salt fish for cooking, soak for twenty-four hours, changing the water several times. Place the fish, meat side down, in the water, with a rack beneath to prevent sinking to the bottom of the pan.

To clean small rugs, place right side down on dry grass or snow, beat with a flat carpet sweeper, sweep, turn over and sweep on right side. The rugs will last longer if they are cleaned in this way instead of hanging them on the line or shaking them by the corners.

Russians Gone Money Mad.

MILLIONS WORTH ONLY CENTS.

Moscow, (Associated Press).—Russia is money mad. Almost everybody from the humblest communist to the erstwhile aristocrat is thinking, dreaming, talking of money. Public events, life, death, all else go by the board. As the ruble drops dizzily, week by week, people cease to talk or do business in millions, as a few months ago. Now everyone of money consequence is not a millionaire but a billionaire and soon they will be trillionaires. A million rubles lately has been equivalent to $2, a billion to $2,000. Speculation has reached such pitch that the cabman speculates on his fare. To one he charges 50,000 rubles for a ride and to another 100,000 or 200,000, according to his wit. The man, woman or child who doesn't get rich in Russia to-day must be a fool, indeed. One has but to buy any article, a pair of shoes, a Persian rug, a lamp, a watch, a ring, a half dozen yards of cloth and hold it for a few days and sell it for twice the cost.

WOMEN SPECULATORS.

Women speculate shrewdly and shrewder than all others are former courtesans and princesses. Since the Government turned the real estate over to its occupants, the rent of apartments and rooms here has jumped from zero to large sums. The right to occupy a mere room, if the owner wishes to sell out, runs from 10,000,000 to 50,000,000 rubles and apartments 50,000,000 to 200,000,000. Legally, newcomers are required to pay nothing, but in order to obtain what they want, they must secretly subsidize the Soviet house committee. There is speculation in cloth. Most of the good cloth now in Russia is smuggled in. A little money is paid here, there, everywhere, and the cloth gets in. Then speculation takes place in its distribution. In the south of Russia cloth is cheap, hence it must be transported to the center or north, where two or three times its cost may be obtained. If sent to Siberia, the profit is immense. Speculation in food is the biggest affair. An official who controls a private car makes millions moving flour, fruit, and wine to the centers of high prices.

CHITCHERIN, THE MAN WHO

SCARCELY SLEEPS.

Moscow, (Associated Press).—The fact that the human machine requires sleep is one of life's tragedies to Geo. V. Chitcherin, the Soviet Foreign Affairs Minister. Sleep is also a tragedy to those who have to do business with him. The best hour to have an interview with Chitcherin is between midnight and 8 a.m. The only hours he devotes to rest are between 8 a.m. and noon. The remainder he spends in work, with short 15-minute to half-hour rest intervals, when he goes to his bachelor room, adjoining his offices, and lies down possibly to sleep for a few minutes. His clerks have a hard time of it, as they cannot adjust their hours to his. They are permitted to work 24 hours at a stretch and then have liberty for two days. Chitcherin is always on the job, except for the four hours mentioned. He has stated that as he grows older he hopes to eliminate these sleeping hours. He looks well, is round-faced and but for red eyelids, shows no signs of his sleepless vigils. Food is also a material difficulty with Chitcherin. He gets so absorbed in his work that he frequently forgets to eat and when reminded that he must, he takes but a few bits of bread and butter. Sometimes, he is indisposed and his doctor invariably finds that it is through lack of eating. When asked if he has eaten anything, Chitcherin is unable to remember.

Vienna's Housing Problem.

STATE TAXING RENTS.

Vienna, (Associated Press).—The state of Vienna is attempting to solve the housing problem by putting a heavy tax on rents from which it hopes to collect 1,500,000,000 kronen a year, which sum is to be used to construct dwellings to be rented without profit. The state government is strongly Social Democratic and opponents of the measure, who are chiefly property owners, denounce it as socialization of housing. The tax is made payable by the tenant. The lowest tax rate would be 100 percent on a rent amounting to 3,000 kronen a year and it would increase until on a surtax basis the maximum tax would be 1,000 percent of the rent paid by the tenant. Rents are now limited by law and it is claimed that private investors would have to get 600 times the legal rate of rent in order to make it profitable for them to build homes.

MRS. MARY A. SPENCER, of Watertown, N. Y., aged 75, who declares she gained fifteen pounds on Tanlac and feels just fine all the time. Was in badly run-down condition.

"Just think of it, at seventy-five years of age to be made well and strong again and gain twelve pounds in weight, but this is exactly what I did after taking Tanlac. Not only that, I feel years younger," said Mrs. Mary A. Spencer, East St., life-long resident of Watertown, N.Y.

"For over a year I was in a terribly run-down condition and I was so nervous and restless that many a night I would hear the clock strike every hour. I was able to eat very little and lost strength, right along, finally becoming so weak I could hardly walk from one room to the other."

"On account of my age I thought my declining health was natural, but Tanlac has proved that I was mistaken. I can do all my own housework now, I sleep all night long, wake up in the morning feeling refreshed and just feel fine all the day long. Tanlac can't be praised too much."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Brazilian Centenary Exhibition.

Mr. H. F. Shortis has received a set of interesting propaganda stamps issued by the Brazilian Government to advertise the National Exhibition, which will be held on September 7th. The stamps were forwarded by Mr. J. Fenelon, Vice-Consul for Brazil. The stamps consist of twenty different designs. With one exception they are printed in three colors. The borders are in green and yellow, and the centres in brick red. The one exception is that which has as its design, a map of South America. In this case, the sea is blue and the map is painted in various colors. All the stamps bear the date "7 September" at the top and in some part of the design, in blue "1922-1922." All the inscriptions are in French. Sixteen of the stamps depict beauty spots of Rio, "Le plus belle ville du monde." One, the map, is labelled "Le plus riche pays du monde." Of the remaining three, two bear portraits of Jose Bonifacio de Andrada de Silva, the father of independence. The last is a portrait of the present President, Dr. Epitacio Pessoa. The stamps are very interesting and should be an excellent advertisement for the Exhibition. Mr. Fenelon, in his covering letter, said that he had forwarded Mr. Shortis' article in Friday's Telegram to the director of the exhibition at Rio. He congratulates Mr. Shortis on his excellent article.

Nero Wants a Police Band.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Even though we are passing through strenuous times there is always some reason for rejoicing, and I was forcibly reminded of this fact last week when I saw for the first time our new Horse Police on New Gower Street.

There is no doubt at all that with their well groomed chargers and smart looking equestrians, this body is a great addition to our Police Force, and Inspector General Hutchings is to be congratulated in organizing and bringing this "arm of the law" into being in so short a period. Of course the small cost of $9,000.00 per annum allocated for this service—enough to give one hundred and eighty worn out fishermen the old age pension allowance, does not matter very much as these Horse Police may never be wanted, but at the same time if the Inspector General thinks we should require them why should we do without them.

You will doubtless remember, Mr. Editor, that about twenty-five or thirty years ago we had a Brass Band in connection with our Police and Fire Department, and I would suggest now that this Band be revived and a Commission appointed and sent away to buy instruments for the formation of the Band without delay. I am sure you will admit that nothing adds more dignity to a parade than a band, and I can remember when a youngster how I followed the big drummer with his chest stuck out and wielding his drum stick, to my joy, and to the joy and delight of every small boy in the city.

Then again how delightful it was to watch the spirited steed dancing on his hind legs and snorting and frothing through the nostrils at the martial strain of some soul stirring air, furnished by the band referred to. It would, indeed, therefore, be an awful hardship if we are obliged to do without this addition to our Mounted Policemen. Go on then, Mr. Hutchings, copy the policy of the Government, get everything you can, including the Band, and let her go till she "bumps" and then God help Newfoundland and Newfoundlanders.

Yours truly,
April 3, 1922. NERO.
