This is hardly a matter of congratulation, for it has evidently prevented the members of the company from thinking up anything new since their previous visit. The newest things about the aggregation were their clothes. The management must be given credit for having cut out a couple of irreverent and in-decent jokes, which formerly marred their performance, but there still re-mains enough of the vulgar and suggestive to warrant a vigorous use of the manager's little hatchet. WON MORE THAN WAS REPORTED

Lieut. Murphy, of the Seventh Regiment, Captured $414 80 in Prizes at Bislev.

The work of London's representative at Bisley, Lieut. T. J. Murphy, of the 7th Regiment, was incorrectly reported by the cable dispatches. Details received by mail show that Lieut. Murphy won in the aggregate £85, or $414 80. As his expenses were only about £35, Lieut. Murphy is ahead of the game. The lieutenant's biggest prize was £15, being second money in the National Rifle Association match, in which he was pitted with the best men in the empire. But for a slight defect in his rifle, noticed when too late, Lieut. Murphy would undoubtedly have won first prize. He was defeated by a Mr. Wallingford, who made for to Murphy's 68, of a possible 70. The firing was at 200 and 600 yards range. Aside from his cash prizes the lieutenant won a valuable bronze cross. His individual prizes amounted to £23, the balance being made up of his share of team prizes.

WITH CANADIANS IN SOUTH AFRICA

News From Former Londoners Now Members of the Baden-Powell Constabulary.

Sergeant - Major Campbell, of the South African Constabulary, formerly a drill instructor at Stanley Barracks, and a member of the Canadian consu- tingent, first as color-sergeant of C Company and afterwards as acting sertising agencies on this continent; they have a perfect system, conducted by ten to a friend in Toronto the following letter descriptive of the Canadian portion of the constabulary. His letter is from Modderfontein, and is dated June 28. In it he tells of how

C. R. I. in London, Ont.), proceeded to Modderfontein, the headquarters of the South African Constabulary, to hand over the books of the contingent. I have heard that the draft has been called a model one, and Captains Fall and Reading were complimented upon the exceedingly satisfactory manner everything in connection with the recruiting and organization had been performed.

"Of course, on the splitting up of the contingent my own position as regimental sergeant-major and that of Sergt.-Major Moore as orderly room clerk, were needless, and for some time, no other berth being available, were each given a troop of recruits from England to get into shape, and I must say that for physique and genticulars are desired, John A. McGilli-vray, of the Temple Building, Toronto, to compare with the Canadians.

"Sergt.-Major Moore has been approached several times to take charge of the orderly room, B Division, which is now being formed, but as it is his first experience in South Africa, he would rather be out on the veldt looking for brother Boer, who has been most industriously sniping the small outposts in the vicinity fontein. It seems quite like old times to hear the familiar 'pluck-pluck' of the Mauser, and reminds me of the good old days when the first Canadian contingent was out here."

CANADIAN LADY KILLED. Chicago, Ill., Aug. 19 .- A young woman who was killed on Saturday evening by an Illinois Central suburban train in the South Park station, in the presence of a throng of suburbanites, was last night identified as Joanna Eugenia Walsh, a student of the University of Chicago. Miss Walsh was a native of New Brunswick, Canada, where her mother still resides. Eye-witnesses to the tragedy affirm that Miss Walsh deliberately threw herself upon the track in front of the approaching engine, and allowed herself to be ground to death. Her friends say she fell accidentally before the Modern Medicine.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: Having regard to the editorial on this subject in your issue of Aug. 15, I would ask the favor to be heard further in the matter. On reading Dr. Osler, I see nothing but confirmation regarding my statements, and in the sentence you clip from his writing, he strikes the keynote to the whole situation, viz.: "There is no limit to the possibility of help from the scientific investigation of the properties and actions of drugs." So argued the immortal Hahmemann, years before Osler was horn, and is it not situation. Osler was born, and is it not singular that it is only now appreciated by some? Hahnemann asserted that "all of science.' We homeopathics are not prepared for any greater acknowledgments of failure than Prof. Osler gives ex-pression to, yet, because medicine is a failure from his standpoint, I am sure nothing but credit is due homeopathy in pointing a way out of drugs become specifics in the perfection

Now, Mr. Editor, in the face of the conflicting utterances of one who is looked up to by the allopathic school as their chief text-book author, I claim the privilege at your hands of affording your product. ing your readers some idea of what homeopathy, or the new school, practice (still evidently new in its opera-tions to Dr. Osler), really means:

I willingly accept all the voluntary admissions of weakness in his own school, but object to the license indulged in when referring to homeopathy, for at best it can be interpreted only as faint praise. I am afraid if the doctor were engaged in a "fight to a finish" with some of our people, he would with all his prestige of position suddenly find himself impaled upon the pinnacle of popular judgment; but it seems to me a matter of too vital significance to be viewed in the light of mere sentiment; and the graduate from allopathic schools should lose no time in acquiring a practical knowledge of homeopathy, since he leaves his alma mater with no better notion of the system than the patients he is called upon to treat, and with shame to his train ing, be it said, frequently not half so good. Being a graduate of the old school myself I know how the stands.

If, as Dr. Osler admits, the much despised mild means of our school are at least as effective as their measures. how much more is such humane treat ent to be desired when it is known to be far more successful; resulting when properly administered in a death rate exceedingly lower, as statistics show, than is to be found under ordinary medicine, and I have an abundance of reliable data at command, were my statement for one moment called in question. For the present, I will confine myself to the following table of comparative statistics, covering a period of five years, compiled from hos-pital reports by Dr. Jos. Buchner, of scription of the system and its found-"Dr. Hahnemann was a physician of high reputation and of ability; not only as a physician, but as a scientist, was he noted. He was moreover, a man of an extremely conscientious disposition. Becoming dis satisfied with medicine, as he been accustomed to practice it, he ceased prescribing, and commenced a course of original investigation. He discovered through experiment upon himself, and members of his own family, that many poisons and well-known drugs had a different effect upon the human system than had hitherto been ascribed to them. Then he called for volunteers, to undertake the work of proving drugs upon themselves, and many became interested in the work, often risking health and life itself-in an effort to benefit mankind. "From these experiments Hahne mann proved the existence of a great natural law in medicine, now recog-nized as Similia Similibus Curantur like cures like. This does not mean as often erroneously stated, that the same cures the same-that if you poison yourself with arsenic you must take a little more arsenic to cure yourself. The correct interpretation s, that when a drug produces certain symptoms upon a healthy individual that drug will cure when disease produces similar symptoms." This subject would require more space than I could expect, to do justice to its every phase. I will also spare your readers the discussion of many evil consequences resulting from improper drugging. I again thank you for your characteristic fairness accorded me.
