THE BEAN TRADE

ket-Demand Not Very Good and Crops Quite Heavy.

[Detroit Free Press.]

C. E. Burns says in his bean letter: Since we have been in the business there has never at this time of year been a situation similar to the present one. We have an immense crop of beans everywhere. Michigan, New York, Cunada, California, all have raised more this season than ever before. Demand has been the smallest from jobbers we have ever known during October, most of the demand at country points being from parties who had sold short for October shipment. Notwithstanding these conditions, we see a comparatively firm holding by dealers, and prices, though about 10c lower than a wilk ago, are still far from low. Now that October sales are all filled, we think offerings of handpicked beans will be more free. Farmers are selling about as fast as dealers can handle them, but not crowding them on the market. Usually they sell more freely after Nov. 1, when the weather is not as favorable for fall work. One thing sure, unless the demand improves materially, we will see a steady decline. We believe the demand will not be active.

ally, we will see a steady decline. We believe the demand will not be active until after the new year, and at present see no encouragement to invest beyond actual needs. actual needs.

Receipts of foreign beans last week were 2,000 bags, and since Sept. 1 about 35,000 bags. Most of these were soid early in the season to arrive. Should the price warrant, there are plenty more to come. We are informed California Lady Washington pea beans are offered on the basis of $190 at western points, taking a freight rate of 35c per bushel from Michigan. These are nice goods, and if they invade our western markets will have some influence on our prices.

DRAMATIC DECADENCE

Do English Actors Deteriorate by Playing to United States Audiences ?-Some Critics Say They Do.

London, Oct. 28.-The long-looked-for production of "The Last of the Dandies," by Clyde Fitch (presented by Beerbohm Tree Thursday evening at Her Majesty's Theater) is a triumoh of acting and stage setting. But the play itself is very disappointing. Beerbohm Tree has put on the piece beautifully, and accurately reproduces the costumes and accessories of the period. He revels in the part of the Dandy in the comedy of the earlier scenes, and the tragedy in the last act is admirable. Lily Hanbury was beautiful and gorgeous as Lady Blessington, and Mrs. Tree strikes a true note of pathos as Lady Summershire. Katie Seymour made her first apeparance since she returned from America at the Alham-bra last week. She has taken out a eaf from her American experiences and sings coon songs and dances with the usual girl chorus. Mrs. Patrick Campbell leaves England on her first visit to America at the end of November, opening at the Knickerbocker Theater, New York, visiting the principal cities, and returning to London in the middle of May. She will play the repertoire which she produced at the Royalty Theater here, and with much the same company, with one or two important additions. The St. mes' Gazette savs: "We hope Mrs. Campbell will return with her charm and distinction unspoiled. When our leading actresses tour the States, we always part with them with something of a pang. So many clever players have gone to America full of power and promise, and have returned coarse in voice and style. The delicate art which levers of good acting admire in London does not appeal to America. Over there something fuller in flavor and more robust seems to be demanded. So our most charming performers have often returned to us vulgarized. with the bloom knocked off them, and with harsh voices and more violent gesture. We and they are the losers. A play of intense heart interest and one interspersed with pathos, bright comedy and strong situations is "A Homespun Heart," which comes to the new Grand next Wednesday, matinee and evening. The scene of the play is laid in Central Ohio and tells the story of the love of a young couple in a rural community, who are for a time parted through the dark designs of a miserly old money-lender, aided by a scheming adventuress, but in the end they are thwarted through the efforts of the half-witted brother of the heroine. As sweet as a spray of apple blossoms is this gem of pastoral dramas. All the scenes are familiar, and there is no straining for unnatural effects. The action is brisk and rapid, the climaxes real and natural, the humor droll and laughable, the setting true and typical to the environments wherein the story is supposed to have been told. BREACH OF PROMISE DROPPED. Clinton New-Era: The action of Miss Walker vs. Wm. Broadfoot has been decided in favor of the latter. Walker resides at St. Thomas, but she formerly resided in Tuckersmith, and Mr. Broadfoot is a prosperous young farmer in the said township of Tuckersmith. The case was commenced in December, 1899, and was brought to re-cover $5,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage. The chief defense to the action was that plaintiff, in a letter written by her to the defendant in August, 1899, released and exonerated him from the promise of marriage. When the case was tried at St. Thomas plaintiff denied having written the letter and she secured a verdict. The defendant appealed the cases, and the judges at Toronto decided unanimously that she did write the letter, and so a new trial was ordered. When the case came up again for trial at St. Thomas, plaintiff had it postponed on the ground that her mother was sick and could not attend court as a witness. Defendant's solicitor then succeeded in having the place of trial changed from St. Thomas to London, and plaintiff gave notice of trial for the last assizes in London, but as she did not proceed to trial with the case, application was made in Toronto to dismiss the action, and this was successful, and the case is now at an end.
