WALL STREET JOURNAL ON STERLING'S ADVANCE

New York, Feb. 22.—Discussing the recent advances scored by the pound sterling in the New York market, the Wall Street Journal this morning says:
"Most of the operations have been financial rather than commercial, due to transfers of balances from the continent to London, but the increased coal exports have been an important factor. Security purchases for continental account on the London market have been large since before the turn of the year. "Improved economic and financial condition in Great Britain has been a psychological factor in sterling's continued strength. Unemployment is gradually declining. The government's financial returns show that the deficit in ancial returns show that the deficit in budget estimates for this year was well over what the actual figure will be. It has been predicted that income and expenditures for the full year will practically balance."
