If more rapid, frequent and luxurious methods are required, they should be aided in their endeavors to provide them; but if all Victorians had been as equally enterprising as the C. P. N. To night the company will appear in a double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and the comic opera, "La Belle Helene." and for the first time here the full strength of the company will appear in both exercises. And in my dream I came to Victoria and was walking its streets. Presently the voice of my guide broke in upon my "Rusticana," for it is well known, but as to "La Belle Helene," it proved the greatthoughts and this is what he seemed to say:

THAT OLD CANNON.

Sir: I note in your paper of October 1 that an interesting relic in the shape of an old cannon, found at Alberni, has been placed in the provincial museum The statement made, however, relative to this cannon having once been part of the equipment of a Spanish named Prince Ferdinand cannot Spanish frigate rect, and I for one should like to know where this information was procured. In 1762, the date mentioned in your account, the West Coast of Vancouver Island was unknown to any European nation, as it was not until 1774 the coast was discovered by Captain Juan Perez in the Spanish corvette Santiago, related in the journals of the voyage kept by the captain, an officer, Estevan Jose rinez, and the chaplains, Rev. Fathers Pena and Crispi. Manuscript copies of these journals were obtained from the imperial archives at Madrid in 1840 by the United States government. I saw the United States government. I say the old cannon, evidently a carronade at Alberni about three years ago, and asked if I might take it in the Quadra to Victoria for the museum, but though to part with it, the other was not, so the cannon remained at Alberni.

I was given to understand by the Indians that this old cannon had been "potlatched" to their ancestors by some trading vessel many years ago, and that the Indians, in transporting it from the vessel by means of a canoe or canoes to their village on the Somas river, had lost the whole thing overboard whilst crossing the banks at the entrance

Sir: In view of the developments of 1,488 the last few days in connection with the 5,105 shocking tragedy which has recently occurred, I have read with interest your remarks editorially this morning, as to the necessity for an immediate deter-mination of the Reservation puzzle. There is another feature of the case which I think is also deserving of attention. It is in connection with the adminwhich I think is also deserving of atten-2,550 tion. It is in connection with the admin-1,700 istration of the city police department, 2,650 which I am free to say I consider such 3,800 that Victoria is not safeguarded. There are men on the force an energetic and as 21,870 capable in detective work as any on the Coast, but they lack organization, and in 1,446 such a crisis are all at sea. Each, it ap-200 pears to me, is working as his individual theories suggest, and perhaps in opposi-tion to his fellows. There is no attempt at concerted, intelligent, systematic un-ravelling of the horrible crime. Chief of Police Sheppard is a head of the department only in name, and while Detective Perdue has for the interests of the city frequently assumed authority that by his position does not devolve upon him, neither he nor anyone else can in such a case as the present take the responsibility of properly initiating and directing a criminal campaign. The Chief, as all who know him will agree, is a man of passed, unever, the meridan of years marking his usefulness in so important a public position as that which he now holds, and while it would perhaps be a lurt to his feelings to succeed him by an active. active, capable, younger man-is it not criminally unfair to those who look to the police for the prevention or punish-ment of crime to allow such motives of misplaced indulgence to stand in the way of an effective organization of the department? I assert again, the city force contains splendid men for their business, but they are, in an emergency challenge the commission of heinous crime. Who of the commissioners will be
