New York, April 1.—Norman Sampson, examiner in the appraiser's department of the custom house, has been suspended. He is 50 years old, and has a wife and children in the south, but paid attentions to a young lady here, pretending to be a widower. It is alleged he wrote her a large number of letters revealing custom house secrets and disclosing irregularities on his own part. The young lady, after discovering how he decrived her, threw herself last May before a train on the elevated road and was seriously injured. After her recovery Sampson persisted in annoying her with letters, which her father handed to the appraiser.
