Gen. Gordon before the sortie on March 16 sent a proclamation to the rebel sheikhs saying: "Come to me without fear, as I have come to you in all confidence. I came not to fight but alone with the help of God and God is with me." The sheikhs replied: "We have read your letter. You say you are with God. If you are with God is you are with us, because God is with us. If you are not with us then God is against thee, and we shall do with thee as we have done with Hicks Pasha."

Other advices from Berber say the Arabs are exasperated against Gordon, as his present action contradicts the preceding proclamation.

Cannes Prince Leopold was conveyed aboard a private yacht owned by his extra equerry, Captain Percival. The yacht was wrecked with the royal party when a short distance off Cannes. No lives were lost as help was near, but the prince was much prostrated. He issued strict orders to keep secret the story of the accident, because he feared the result of the intelligence upon the health of the princess. In the afternoon, after reaching shore, he said: "Percival, I don't know why it is, but I have most gloomy forebodings. I have such ill-luck. I would not mind if it affected me only, but my evil fate, seems determined to make my friends share my misfortunes. I believe I am doomed to bring sorrow and disaster to all those I desire to be with me as my friends. This feeling oppressed me inexpressibly to-day, and I have been unable to rid myself of the thought that I would rather die here than anywhere else I have ever been." Capt. Percival tried to argue the prince out of his melancholy, but failed. Prince Leopold died in Capt. Percival's arms in the room and before the very window where he confided to him his forebodings.

Rapid Breathing an Anæsthetic.

From Popular Science Monthly.

Olaf Rygh, the Norwegian Herodott tells us that, when the old Baresarks felt the approach of their end, they robbed death of its sting by drifting out to sea in scuttled or burning boat, and thus expired, "screaming the wild battle songs of their tribe." The Roman gladiators shouted and laughed aloud while their wounds were being dressed. A scalded child sobs and gasps for a therapeutical purpose; instinct teaches it the readiest way to benumb the feeling of pain. The physiological rationale of all this is that rapid breathing is an anosthetic. In a paper numb the feeling of pain. The physical logical rationale of all this is that rapid breathing is an anæsthetic. In a paper read before the Philadelphia Medical society, May 12, 1880, Dr. W. A. Bonwill ascribes that effect to the influence of the surplus of oxygen which is thus forced upon the lungs, just as by the inhalation of nitrous oxide gas (which is composed of the same elements as common air, but with a larger proportion of oxygen), and mentions a large variety of cases in his own practice where rapid breathing produced all the essential effects of a chemical pain obtunder, without appreciably diminishing the consciousness of the patient. Persons who object to the use of chloroform (perhaps from an instinctive dread that in their case the ether slumber might prove a sleep that knows no waking) can benumb their nerves during the progress of a surgical operation by who object to the who object to the tive dread that in their case the ether alumber might prove a sleep that knows no waking) can benumb their nerves during the progress of a surgical operation by gasping as deeply and as rapidly as possible. "One of the most marked proofs of its efficacy," says Dr. Bonwill, "was the case of a boy of M years of age, for whom I had to extract the upper and lower first permanent molars on both sides. He breathed rapidly for nearly a minute, when I removed in twenty seconds all the teeth. He declared the seconds all the s I had to extract the upper and lower life permanent molars on both sides. Father Bergin did not think this board could deal with the case, as the school law provided that all salaries must be paid the year in which they are earned. The matter dropped.

Fire at Tonkins' Hat Store.

At 8.30 last evening Policeman Ross sounded an alarm from box 68 (King and Yonge), dense smoke having been discoviated in the heads of the affair. Drs. Clark and Buchan and half a dozen other attaches of the asylum were examined; and testified as to the manner of treating patients.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that Rachael Stephens came to her death by heing beaten on the head with a wooden bucket in the hands of Veloria McKinley, but as the latter was of unsound mind they could not attach any malice aforethought to the act.

The woman McKinley was unable to be examined at the inquest. She was pros-trated all day, and the jury visited her apartment before returning their verdict.

March 13, 1883, and the clerk of the crown produced the ballot papers to prove that defendant voted in Bracebridge on that date. In an examination in Barrie defendant admitted that he voted.

Mr. Osler contended that Mr. Taylor was appointed under the free grants and homesteads act and merely located the free lands for settlers. He had never given a bond of security under the crown lands act, and therefore was no agent for the crown lands department. In his address to the jury, Mr. Osler drew a harrowing picture of a poor man with a large family being condemned to lie in jail till he rotted because he was unable to pay the fine or penalty of $2000. "Why," said he, "there is not $2000 in circulation in the whole district of Muskoka and Parry Sound. Where would he get that large amount of money?" is not $2000 in circulation in the whole district of Muskoka and Parry Sound. Where would he get that large amount of money?" Mr. Arnoldi smiled when he heard the remark about Taylor being a man with a large family, and said he was a bachelor. In addressing the jury the chief justice said he himself was in exactly the same position as the defendant. If he (the judge) voted at an election he would be compelled to pay $2000 or go to jail. It did not matter whether he was a poor man or not. There were two points for the jury to consider, viz., "Did Taylor vote, and at the time of his voting was he a crown lands' agent within the meaning of the act?"

Mr. Osler's tender remarks evidently impressed the jury, who after a few minutes' absence returned a verdict that Taylor was not a crown lands' agent when he voted, and he does not pay the penalty.

he voted, and he does not pay the penalty.

"You have settled a point of law, gentlemen," said the chief justice, "which I anticipated would have to go to a higher

Edgewood Folks at the Grand. Toronto theatre-goers are an apprecia tive community. This community is livided up into many classes. Some favor tragedy, some opera, a large some the ballet, some comedy, some minstrelsy, some low comedy, etc., but when a good some low comedy, etc., but when a good attraction comes to town, no matter of what class, there is always a constituency for it. This is no exception to Sol Smith Russell. There is hundreds of people who like to see and hear Sol sing, and he and his company were greeted with a crowded house at the Grand last night. The comedy of Edgewood Folks has its location in rural Connecticut and New York city, and there are lovers, lost wills, a midnight robbery, a parson, a deacon, a villian, and all that sort of thing in it. But Mr. Russell sprinkles his inimitable creations of character comedy all through the piece, with a very pleasing result.

Matinee this afternoon. Last performance to night.

HONORABLE CONDUCT OF A TO-

From the Canadian Practitioner.

On the occasion of the recent invasion of Toronto by the notorious double Ks, the press was very extensively subsidized. One paper, however, refused, as it always has in connection with the same fellows, to take the shilling, considering it wrong to insert disreputable advertisements at any price. The paper referred to is the Toronto World, which by the tway is the cheapers, most independent and and we needed no such assertion, for there was not the slightest indication that he was undergoing a severe operation.
