Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

GIFTS TO GIVE THE INVALID

A canary would chirrup many a weary hour away.
A pretty, lacy boudoir cap would be appreciated by a woman.
A pine or rose petal pillow would afford refreshing fragrance.
An electric flashlight within reach at night is almost indispensable.
A tea wagon to wheel up beside the bed would vary the meal service pleasingly.
A food warming plate such as is used for babies would keep a cup of bouillon warm.
An Indian blanket would keep off many a draft and make a varying temperature unnoticeable.
An attractive rose bowl or long stemmed vase would lend its charm to the invalid's bouquets.
The sick person appreciates many changes of cheery bath robes, negliges and dainty fancy slippers.
A night bottle with a glass tipped over it and a spoonful of cordial in the stopper would be handy in case of a chill.
A prettily lined and ribbon bedecked box, filled with the patient's favored toilet preparations, is practical, dainty and very acceptable.
One of the new cache nightgowns of chiffon would be very convenient to slip into to take a meal or when an unexpected guest arrives.
A vacuum bottle would bring comfort, and some hot water bags have such beautiful covers that they are pleasing as well as useful.

HER FIRST EXPERIENCE.

Mistress - Dinner won't be ready for two hours! Good gracious, Norah, what's the delay?
Norah - Why, mum, you said you wanted split pea soup, and, faith, it's taken me two hours and twenty minutes to split 300 peas, and there are 470 to split yet. O! counted 'em myself.

Asking
Time

A Case of Perseverance
By ELIZABETH GAINES WILCOXSON Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Valor McGehee, the boss of the lighterage business, a tenth owner in the Crown mine and owner of the little sawmill up the creek, was a stalwart person of easy manners and the scars of fair fights.
Every day at the same hour he came sauntering in and straddled the bench not far from the sandwich board where Mrs. Taylor was always busy slicing bread and butter.
Her long, oddly slanting, light gray, wise eyes gave him a look of impersonal friendliness as she nodded good morning and briskly lifted two thick sandwiches to a crockery plate and without losing a motion poured a cup of coffee. These she placed before him.
He breakfasted leisurely. As he ate he talked with the cook.
"D'you know what day this is?" he asked one morning.
She flicked an inquiring glance at him, drove her knife through the loaf and repeated:
"Do I know what day it is? Sure, it's Friday." And she smiled. She had a battling, secretive smile.
The man smiled, too, watching her face.
"D'you know why I call you Mona Lisa?" he drawled banteringly.
"Friend of yours I remind you of?" she offered, another smile lurking in the corners of her mouth.
"You've guessed it. She had a smile like yours. It was a ticklish proposition, that smile of Mona's. You could never tell whether it was with you or on you. But what particular Friday is this?"
"The day of the month? The 10th."
"Correct," said the man. "Which 10th?"
She caught up a big wooden bowl and began piling up the sandwiches into it with the automatic speed of machinery.
She shook her head at his question.
"Which 10th would you say?"
"Two months ago today you arrived to open up this haven for the hungry.
That's what happened to turn the 10th into a special red letter day," he explained.
"So I did."
"And I was your first customer," he reminded.

and stiff. "I suppose you remember what they looked like once?"

The man blinked and licked his lips.
"I remember, Joyce," he said humbly. "I thought maybe you'd teach music. You could play right well."
"I tried it for a year and stayed."
"if you'll just give me one more chance."
"You can have all the chance in the world-away from this place. I shall not molest you, though I suspect you've got no right to your freedom.
But you just get this once for all: You are to move on at once. And meanwhile we are strangers. I don't now you. You are-McGehee entered, and she turned abruptly and poured a cup of coffee, which with food she placed before the man already seated, naming as she did so the price of the meal.
As he passed, McGehee bestowed upon the presence a glance of curiosity and dislike, then sauntered on to his accustomed place. With deliberation that savored of malice Mrs. Taylor filled a cup and plate and set them before him.
He looked at the food with mingled amusement and protest.
"Do I have to eat every hour?"
"Of course not, but in here except to eat," she pointed out.
"Of, very well," drawled McGehee and began to stir in his cup.
He stirred slowly and sipped the coffee and nibbled the sandwich, but he did not attempt conversation until the presence at the far end of the room was gone.
As the man went out Valor gave him another scrutiny and looked inquiringly at Mrs. Taylor. It struck him when he came in that she and the man were having words, and the thought came back to him.
But the morning was now growing late, and she was getting ready for the noon rush, and somehow, though he could not have told why, the atmosphere seemed subtly against any more half earnest jesting.
So he moodily formed a big interrogation point in the center of his place with breadcrumbs, put a coin, the price of the meal, under his cup, swung his legs over the bench and went out.
He did not come back the next hour, for the next, as he had promised. The camp was suddenly in a turmoil over the disaster at the Crown mine. Mc-Gehee, with others, gave the rest of the day to caring for the five men wounded by the explosion and burying the three who were killed.
"He claimed he was an expert powder man, just what they were looking for. He lied. He hadn't been there twenty minutes before-oh, well, he got his foot. But that didn't make it any easier for the rest of 'em. It was that fellow who was eating here yesterday morning when I came in for my second breakfast. You remember him?" He had entirely forgotten his impression of the day before.
"I remember him. It's those he left wounded I pity the most. The others are dead."
Her face looked inexpressibly weary.
He looked her unusual expression.
"You aren't sick, are you?" he asked, with sudden perplexity.
She shook her head.
"No. Thinking of the mine accident kept me awake. That's all," she said.
Valor McGehee took occasion to observe:
"Since I wasted so much time yesterday I guess I'll just stay right here till you tell me your name and if you are a widow."
His eyes met his, and never had her smile been so enigmatic.
"There's a time to ask and a time to answer. My name is Joyce, and-I am a widow," she said.

Trust Kitchener

[The Daily Sketch.] Do we trust Lord Kitchener? Of course we do. Then if we trust Lord Kitchener we shall be willing to accept loyally even the hard discipline of silence.
But think of the reward, and remember Britain's old story! How Nelson searched for the French fleet from July to October, how it lured him far into the Atlantic, escaped him, and threatened England with invasion-and yet, and yet, Trafalgar followed. And think of Wellington, retreating, pursued, in that winter of 1810, behind the lines of Torres Vedras, held helpless there for long months-with victory on victory at the end. Yes, we can afford to be patient-to trust Kitchener.
