Ministerial Changes in Perspective .- Notwithstanding the great progress of "enligh-tenment" and "political science" in these dent of the Board of Controul, and Postmaster General, will all be vacated by their present occupants before the meeting of Parliament. The first of these offices most persons concur in thinking will be filled by lord Ellenborough, and doubless his energy and vigilant attention to business would make his services very valuable in that important of fice. Lord Haddington's health and temperament are scarcely equal to the work which is new required from the First Lord of the Admiralty, and there sceems but little reason to expect that the labours of the office will be lighter for some years to come.
