WEST SHORE RAIL WAY PROBE CAME TO ABRUPT CONCLUSION

Minute and Account Books of Defunct Company Are Missing, Witnesses Cannot Remember Things and Investigation Has Come to Inconse quential Ending.

municipal representatives from the shore counties of Lake Huron, where the ill-fated West Shore Railway was launched on its brief disastrous career, the investigation before the Ontario Railway Board yesterday came to an abrupt and inconsequential conclusion. The effect of this was all the more apparent because of the meteroic flash of evidence at the previous sitting which promised some startling information on the management of the enterprise. Procedure was impossible however, and the hands of the prosecuting counsel were ited by the lapses of memory of the chief witnessee and the mysterious disappearance of the animute and account books of the company.

J. W. Moyes, the controlling spirit of the railway directorate and the office of the late S. C. Smoke alike deny any knowledge of the whereabouts of these documents, and on them practically the whole hope of tracing the huge expenditures was based. The evidence of the last day, however, went to show that the existence of the Huron Construction Company, which was undercontract to perform the work, was even more "phostly" than the chairman of the board thought. Of the directorate every member of the railway engineer, was learned to have been on the payroll of the construction company as well, and that his salary in nearly every case came from the latter. The reconciliation in this matter had been left. to Mr. Moyes.

"Mr. Moyes was evidently the whole works," remarked a member of the court.

As to the personnel of the construction company the court could apparently gain nothing. Could Gain Nothing.

As to the personnel of the construction company the court could apparently gain nothing. The fact stood that at a meeting of the railway directorate the tender of these people swept all before it, and was adopted with no discussion. The minutes of that meeting were not entrusted to the secretary nor those of any following. Altho it was a business custom for him to handle this matter he had never acted in that capacity, but left it to Mr. Moyes and Mr. Smoke on their advice. He was a secretary in name only.

Proudfoot commented rather Mr. Proudfoot commented rather bitterly on the slience maintained by Mr. Moyes, who above all held the knowledge that would have hastened the inquiry. In asking for a postponement he made it clear that there would be some yery energetic work done in the search for the missing papers. The firm of Watson and Smith had volunteered all assistance possible, and it was hoped to also gain some of the payrolls which had also, for some strange reason, been kept out of the secretary's hands and gone to the Toponto office, whither they had disappeared.

The sums which Mr. McEwan could remember as having passed thru his hands totalled $195,000, of which the bulk had gone to the construction company and the rest into the Moyes

The examination of John McEwan, of Goderich on the directorate, took the nature of a severe grilling by Mr. Proudfoot, who was incensed over the Proudfoot, who was incensed over the freely confessed ignorance of Mr. Moyes and his associates as to the present location of the account books. Mr. Moyes appeared according to subpoena, but disclaimed absolutely any knowledge of papers that might throw light on the investigation. He was replaced in the box by Mr. McEwam. His first statement s were to the effect that tho the supposed secretary of the radiway he was that in name only. He had never kept the minute books or entered the business therein. Engineer Middlemist, of the board told of his inspection tour over the line. He found 14 1-2 miles of rough line. He found 14 1-2 miles of rough trackage, overgrown with weeds, with decaying culverts and poor workmanship in general. All the work could easily have been done for $297,640 or $261,787 when the contractor's profit was withdrawn.

The board then adjourned the inquiry sine die.
