

AN HISTORICAL JOURNAL
OF THE
CAMPAIGNS IN NORTH-AMERICA,

FOR THE YEARS 1757; 1758; 1759; AND 1760, &c. &c.

ORDERS for Foreign Service.

SIR,

Dublin.

"I N obedience to the commands which the Earl of Rothes<sup>1</sup> hath received from their Excellencies the Lords Justices,<sup>1757. February. 2d.</sup> it is his Lordship's orders, that Major-General Kennedy's regiment of foot,<sup>2</sup> now under your command, do hold themselves in readiness to march from their present quarters to Cork, according to routs which will be sent to them for that purpose, where they will receive orders to embark for foreign service: they are to carry along with them their tents and camp equipage. The usual number of carriages will be allowed them by the government; the cannon, ammunition carts, and the artillery stores which belong to the regiment, [2] are to be left at Galway, under the care of the troops, which are to remain there.

"To Lieutenant-Colonel Crosbie, or officer commanding General Kennedy's regiment at Galway.

"I am, Sir, &c.

"ROBERT CUNINGHAME,"

"(A true copy.)"

"Adjutant-General.

"Ch. Crosbie.

"To Lieutenant John Knox, or officer commanding at Athenry."

<sup>1</sup> John, Earl of Rothes, Colonel 3rd Regiment of Foot, 1732; Major-General, January 1743; and Lieutenant-General, 1747.

<sup>2</sup> Major-General James Kennedy was Colonel of the 43rd Regiment of Foot.

<sup>3</sup> Robert Cuninghame, appointed Colonel of the 58th Regiment in 1767.