

VICTORIA, B. C.

VICTORIA, Vancouver Island, capital city of British Columbia, is one of the handsomest cities in the world, and enjoys a climate which for equability and all round appeal is not equalled on the North American continent.

Here is a spot having all the charm of setting afforded by low lying wooded hills, silver and blue sea, and lofty snow-crowned mountains, where flowers and shrubs, rare elsewhere in America, thrive; where the sun shines more than anywhere else in Canada, and where the seasonal range of temperature is only 22 degrees.

Victoria has a daily average of $5\frac{1}{2}$ hours bright sunshine throughout the year. The size of its population is about 50,000. It is widely famous as a residential city, and offers many attractive possibilities for industries.