than the average political controversy. It almost tempts one to wish that the parties were divided on so vital a question. However, it is not necessary either to exaggerate or to belittle either mode of transportation. Our object should be to make the best of both. This is the secret of the success of the Duluth-Buffalo-New York route. It has increased.

The above facts bear silent, but pottent, the expected increase in the crop is only 1,085,000, indicating a somewhat smaller yield per acre. But taking the whole six years the yield per acre has increased.

The above facts bear silent, but pottent, the above facts bear silent, but pottent, testimony to the plans that have been matured, but it is also noteworthy that some western members of parliament from constituencies which cannot be reached inside of four or five days have left for home ostensibly on private business, but really to get in readiness for the contest, which, unless prebeen hitherto supposed to give the maximum efficiency of water transportation and of transportation by rail. There is a growing opinion that we in Canada can offer at least as good a Canada can route by using the lakes as far as a double. In flax, no figures are given Georgian Bay or Lake Huron port, and before 1902; the increase in acreage then transhipping, and the residents and yield, in one year, is more than hopeful over the prospect.

AN ERRONEOUS VIEW.

In some of the current discussion on Mr. Chamberlain's proposals in England, there seems to be a misconception as to the attitude of the colonies, especially of Canada. It is represented that we have displayed our affection for Great Britain, and that Great Britain is expected to reciprocate by sacrificing the benefits of free trade. This is entirely wrong. Those trade. This is entirely wrong. Those Canadians who are in sympathy with Chamberlain's ideas are not free traders at all, do not regard free trade as a benefit, and therefore do not ad-
