D.: Q.-How can I reduce my dryness in the pony were the natural acondition in which the entire organism suffers." But Dr. W. B. Cannon of Harvard University considers it a purely local phenomenon.

According to this physiologist "the post are made into a mash with water?"

Gryness in the pony were the natural get daily outdoor exercise. You should reduce the amount of sugars, starches and oils which are taken into the body. Food laxatives, such as uncooked bran and green vegetables, help in the reducting process. Drink lots of water only between times. You must not partake of alcoholic beverages of any kimd at any time. Do not eat any bread expectations of old age; that there was reduce the amount of sugars, starches and oils which are taken into the body. Food laxatives, such as uncooked bran and observant. He said: "The oats are undigested. Would it not be better to have them water?"

Ordinary thirst of an hour or so can be relieved by putting a pebble under the tongue. This prevents evaporation by talk and an open mouth, and also stirs the saliva to be formed by the salivary glands.

If you drink a pleasant mineral drink with citrate of soda in it, you will observe large quantities of saliva formed. Ether does this also. The sensation of thirst is absent when the saliva flows freely.

chord in my memory silent since child-hood.

With the fondness of a girl child for coining names for herself, I announced one day to my mother that I wished her to call herself and me, her namesake, by the "little name Meg" instead of the "big name Margaret." For a long time the picture of my mother's face, suddenly turned ashen at my question, remained in my childish memory, then gradually faded, because neither of us ever had referred to the incident again.

But at the woman's muttered exclamation my mother's face flashed before me as plainly as if her living self stood in the room, her voice shaken, roughened to raucousness from its usual soft accents sounded in my ears as it had done on that long gone day.

"Never that name, child; Never let it cross your lips!"

"Forglye Me."

"Why?" I asked with childish inquisitiveness.

"Why?" I asked with childish inquisitiveness.

She stooped, took my face between her hands and spoke with a sort of cold intensity that made me shiver.

"Because the person I loathe most in the world used to call me 'Meg' when we were girls together," she said. "She killed my happiness. She is the worst woman in the world. If you ever allow yourself to use that name, even when you are grown, I shall know it if I am twenty years dead."

I do not think she realized that she was speaking to a child, or, indeed, just what she was saying, so carried away was she by the hateful memory that

So out of that hollow log crawled Jimmy Coon. He looked all around. He with singer and held it up to see which way the wind was blowing. He wind was plowing. He wind blowing hard in the tree-tops and the leaves scurrying along on the ground, and that queer smell, getting stronger and stronger. The queer thing was that it smelled like fire! "But there isn't any fire, so what can it be?" said Jimmy to himself. He shook Teddy Possum to wake him up, but Teddy was so worn out with all he had been through that he just wouldn't wake up. Cousin Bruin was snoring li some old giant, and he couldn't bud him, so he said, "Chatterbox, you r up that pine tree and look all arou and see what there is to it!"
