Why "Wrong Number"?

THE vast majority of telephone operators A are conscientious and painstaking. To them a "wrong number" is as distressing as to the person who gets it.

It is to the operator's interest that the caller should reach his party promptly, should finish his talk without interruption and then be disconnected. A "wrong number" means, besides irritation for two subscribers, double work for the operator. Aside from failure to consult the latest telephone directory, wrong numbers arise chiefly through failure of the operator to hear clearly the number asked for. This failure in turn arises from two causes:-

1. Indistinct speaking. 2. Speaking away from the telepphone, instead of directly into the mouthpiece. May we not count on your co-operation in these two important respects? Always speak distinctly, directly into the mouthpiece.
