Utilities Board Making Every Effort to Obtain Supplies.

"Like a good many private dealers the public utilities commission has been unable to purchase coal, but if we can obtain any at a reasonable price to restock the municipal coal ard we will do so," said I suchanan, general manager of ublic utilities commission, today, "We have a small supply on said E. V now, but it is buckwheat coal, and i not in demand much. Before purchasing this year we will be sure that there is a demand for it. We purchased large quantities last winter, but as the season was mild there was no demand for it, and we had to sell-most of it to large institutions. We do not want to do that again. The coal yard was not intended to obtain supplies for large consumers, but for the people who were

At 11 o'clock Fireman George Bolton, who served overseas in the same batalion as the bereft father, was successfifth and final one of a series on "Love" taken from I. Corinthians, xiii., Paul's great chapter of love.

Speaking from the text, "Now abideth faith, hope and love, and the greatest of these is love," the pastor pointed out why this is a fact. He informed the congregations that because of its native source or origin in contrast to faith and hope which are creature virtues, love is the greatest. "Love is a creation," he sald. "God is love."

"Love is the end to which faith and hope are the means," he continued. "Love is the end to which faith and hope are for ourselves." He illustrated the above demonstration of love suprementation by scripture quotations and summed up the four sermons preached previously on love is waith.

Chose two verses as his text. The first was, St. John, x, verse 10, "I have come that ye might have it more abundant-lay. And the second, Romans vi., verse of the vages of sin is death." Mr. Agnew based his sermon on both verses. In his opening remarks he conveyed to the audience that it is the sane and the wealthy, as a rule, that chose death the wealthy in the wealthy was a rule, that chose death the wealthy in the wealthy was a rule, that chose death the wealthy in the wealthy in the wealthy in the wealthy in t hearts. If we do not wish to take Him into our lives we are the ones who are going to suffer. He is always ready to take us into His heart, and it is our duty to let Him in. He died to save us and we are not asking of profound and unapproachable manner. "Our attitude toward Christ today is similar to that of the people of His time, in that we often overlook the value of simplicity, neither are we practical in our following of His our duty to let Him in. He died to save us, and we are not taking advant-age of it. New life comes when we open the door of our life to Him. When we die, and through our life, we do not live under His influence, we are paid for our sins by the wages of death.

"Jesus cannot break us from some of the sins we do, but He can break you, and leave you forsaken and down-trodden. We know the result. Now that we have a chance to take Him into our lives and live with Him, why can't we do it? If we do, we can live with God and our life will be eternal."

"Money is the line of least resistance in Christian work. One of the greatest needs is that of personal work."

In closing, an appeal was made for more profitable service, that each should
