

RED CROSS WORKER BACK FROM EUROPE

Mrs. Waagen Gives Idea of Conditions—Canadian Organization Ranks First.

Something of the ravages that war has left on the civil populations of the countries of Europe may be judged by a statement made by Mrs. Mary Waagen of Alberta, who has just returned from overseas after visiting a number of the Red Cross centres associated with the Red Cross League of Geneva.

In the course of an interview with The World, Mrs. Waagen said: "I saw a few of the Austrian children. Five thousand of them are in Sweden, but these are only the children of the middle class. The condition of the poorer children is so bad that they cannot leave the country."

It will be remembered that Mrs. Waagen was an interesting speaker at the annual meeting of the Red Cross Council, which met in Toronto under the presidency of His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire. Young and enthusiastic herself, this visitor from the west thought of forming joint branches for Red Cross work, and it was on this she addressed the Toronto council. During her visit abroad, she spoke in England and on the continent on her plan for organizing the little folk, and her ideas met with general approval.

Best in the World. "I was with the Red Cross League in Geneva for a week," said Mrs. Waagen. "It is in charge of Sir David Henderson, whom they all idolize, and they are a very happy family. They have two buildings, and it was delightful to see the splendid way the departments get on with one another. Just now they are helping to fight disease in Poland, and their general work is to establish the Red Cross in countries where it does not exist, and to strengthen it where it is already there. There are 28 nations represented, and, of course, Canada is a national entity. Great interest is being shown even from far away countries like South America, where the Red Cross is being organized. The Canadian and American Red Cross are said to be the best in the world, was the good report that comes to us from overseas."

Sweden when Mrs. Waagen arrived. They looked upon her as their own, and she was the way the relationship between the English princess and the people of the country of her adoption was described. As a medium for spreading the doctrine of sanitation and other means of preserving health the Geneva organization is just about to publish its "Public Health Journal," and this in four languages—French, English, Italian and Spanish. There is a nursing section for the raising and training of nurses and this is under Miss Alice Fitzgerald, who had charge of the American nurses overseas, and who as reported by Mrs. Waagen is highly regarded in the work upon which she is engaged.

A Wonderful Hospital. "Christiana has a hospital built by the Red Cross, the most wonderful place I have ever seen," said Mrs. Waagen. The city already had a communal hospital, but there was no place where those willing to pay might go, so the Red Cross built theirs. It is just like going into your own home. Everything is so pretty—the curtains and china coverings—and words failed in describing the element so seldom found in institutions—homelike comfort.

There is a nursing sisters' home and a training school attached to the hospital. The newness of the peace idea of the Red Cross was apparent when Mrs. Waagen was at Geneva, as she was remembered as a delegate at the peace conference, went into the neutral countries lecturing on the Red Cross and they would not at first listen to her. "She wants us to go into the war," was their first verdict. The altogether changed—to prevent sickness to stamp out disease where it exists and to help in any emergency which the league at Geneva is trying to extend its ramifications. This relief even includes the giving of clothing. Mrs. Waagen gave specific proof of this when she told of many thousands who had been assisted in this way in the west. In Alberta, The World was told, a joint relief council is being established with many representatives from business and municipal bodies. When in operation this body will work with the Red Cross in case of disaster.

FROZEN FISH GOOD FOOD

The following item has been submitted by William L. Pound, deputy minister of naval service, in an effort to promote Canadian fisheries: "Do you know the principle of the refrigerator in your home, in which you place foods from day to day to be preserved? You have absolutely no prejudice, have you, against foods that are preserved for several days in it? Well, then, fish when taken from the water are frozen immediately, and a glazed coating is put over them. Immediately they are put in cold storage until required. During hot weather they are shipped under this condition, as it would be impossible to ship them the same distance in a fresh state. Analysis shows that the fish taken to the kitchen in a frozen state contains 100 per cent of the food value it had when taken from the water, and an experiment on your part will prove that it contains 100 per cent of the delicious flavor."

SELINA BELIEVES IN BACKING HERSELF.

"LEAVE us have a loan of your patent-leather belt, will yer, kid?" I says to like the letter "H," same as Hil's gettin' like onto "O." "Where do you get that polite stuff?" she says, diggin' the belt outta the ice box all 'camo-flopped' with salad dressing. "A fine way to treat your belt," I says, tryin' to reprover her and at the same time tryin' to be nice about it—you know, applyin' the personality system, which I am at the present time all set on studyin'. Maybe I ain't sprung it on you yet, is that right? Then rather round. Selina's ad. in one of them magazines the other day about how everybody is findin' a gold mine in this personal efficiency bunk, I set me down and writ for the big idea, and like a Rolls-Royce takes a hill on high, that's how I breeze down to the postoffice when I get the card tellin' me that my priceless genius has arrived. You know how I am, always at the tail-end of a crowd. It was all of two hours before I pushed myself forenced the wicket. "How to grow a sweet personality," sings out the book, openin' my parcel. "What's the big idea? That there belongs to me, ain't it?" I says. "Ya, but I gotta see what it is," he says, spillin' the whole thing over the counter, and everybody turned their eyeballs on me, thinkin', I guess, that I was givin' the little book a large order. But do you wanna know somethin'? I jest had to cast a lamp on the cover of that book and all my liabilities had become assets. Personality began to radiate off me like I'd used pan-saline or somethin'. "Gave way for the lady," shouts the slew, as I aashayed out, and, bulvieve me, I felt like that Vore dame when a guy opened the door for me, and it shore looks to me like I could sell an electric heater to an African before I finish the first lesson—to say nothin' of the last, by such time as I'll be the originator of the avan glide or a hole-proof mesh bag. Leave it to me!

On the occasion of her forthcoming marriage to Frank Richards of The World staff, Miss Vera Swanston, who for several years has been in charge of the Lakewood Mansions Apartments, was presented with a beautiful cabinet of community silver by the tenants of both buildings last evening. On her return, about two hundred people were gathered to greet her, singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "Here Comes the Bride." With a few well-chosen words, Mr. J. Macbray presented the cabinet of silver to the bride-to-be, as an indication of the high regard in which she is held by all the tenants. Following the presentation, Miss B. ### SIR EDWARD KEMP'S CONDITION FAVORABLE

Overseas Minister of Militia Passes Comfortable Night After Serious Operation.

In connection with Sir Edward Kemp's illness, it ought to be stated that one of the most important of the many things done by him while in England as overseas minister of militia, was an almost complete settlement of all the accounts between the Canadian government and the British government in connection with the conduct of the war, involving many millions of pounds of money. For weeks and weeks Sir Edward overworked himself in negotiating this settlement, dealing with one large item after the other, and getting an adjustment of at least one disputed item each time money passed, mainly from Canada to the credit of the Mother Country. So far parliament has not been put in possession of the information as to the settlement of these enormous operations. Some public men predicted that such a settlement would occupy years after the war. But Sir Edward practically exchanged receipts as he left England for home.
