Test Town Vindicating Doctors' Theories

MANSFIELD (O.) EXPERIMENTS PROVE SUCCESS OF NATIONAL HEALTH PROGRAM

Barbara, little daughter of Mayor Henry Brunner of Mansfield, and Dr. J. Hart Davis, child specialist.

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Mansfield, O.—For two years this little city of 30,000 has given itself to science as a subject for a gigantic experiment in humanity.

Now, with three more years to go in this five-year experiment, America is looking toward this city with far greater hope and expectation, than it had two years ago, for the development of a healthier, stronger happier population.

Such encouraging prospects arise out of the progress already shown by the Child Health Demonstration—the official name for this human experiment. For out of frail, bony frames have come virile, muscular bodies, testifying to the soundness of the theories put into practice here.

This was the idea when the American Red Cross provided a fund of Council, now the American Child Health Association of which Herbert Hoover is president. It has been an intention to collaborate all branches of health into one system which, if proven practicable by this Mansfield experiment, may be adopted by other localities of the country.

"This is putting scientific theory into actual, positive practice," explains Dr. Walter H. Brown, who has been directing the demonstration. "We are approaching the problem of community health from an entirely different viewpoint. Heretofore we've stressed too much the negative side of health, rather than the positive side."

"Now we are getting the idea over of prevention of disease, rather than its cure."

"Our main purpose is to develop the technique of health, education and training on a scale that the average community can understand and afford to pay for. Our approach is definite, in providing proper medical attention to the families, in our nursing system and our educational program."

So Dr. Brown and his assistants—in fact all the physicians of Richmond county, who are heart and soul with him—are training childhood itself into better health habits. Starting with the expectant mother, they develop instincts of health into the youth of the community.

They are succeeding with amazing progress. Nurses and medical men are going into the homes to spread the gospel of infant care and health. Schools have turned over all their facilities to the demonstration, so that now a complete method of child health education is in progress.

From everywhere comes only encouraging co-operation. No attempt is made at health education or attention in a family, unless the demonstration has obtained full consent from the parents concerned. Yet, no opposition has been encountered.

Every city and county authority is working hand and glove with the demonstration.

It is this co-operation, Dr. Brown suggests, that has helped the demonstration progress toward its definite goal.

Dried Fruits.

If you found it impossible to can fruit last summer and now find fresh fruit a bit expensive for steady diet try the dried fruits.

Although these are not cheap, when you consider that each separate piece will swell to its original size when soaked in water before using and that all the natural sweetness is in the fruit you will decide that the finished dish made with dried fruit is not expensive.

Wash dried fruits thoroughly before putting to soak. Scrub with the hands or with a soft brush, using several waters. Then let the fruit stand in cold water for several hours and stew in this water. Slow cooking for a long time is required to bring out the sweetness of the fruit without breaking it and making it "mushy."

Desserts made with dried fruits should not be scorned as last resorts. Carefully prepared and seasoned they are delicious and might well grace a company dinner.

This stamned fig pudding, served with whipped cream, leaves nothing to be desired.

Fig Pudding.

One-half pound dried figs, 1-2 cup suet, 3-4 cup sugar, 2-4 cups bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup milk, 2 eggs.

Wash figs and dry thoroughly. Put through food chopper. Put suet through with hands. Dissolve baking powder in milk and pour over bread crumbs. Soda or baking powder blends crumbs are even better than ordinary bread crumbs. Beat eggs until light. Beat in sugar and add figs, suet and milk mixture and salt. Mix well and pour into mold. Steam three hours and serve with whipped cream.

CLUB DISCUSSES EVENTS OF YEAR

Achievements in Medicine, Archaeology and Other Branches Reviewed

Following an established custom the programme for the meeting of the Eclectic Club last night, being the last night of the year, consisted of a review of the Current Events. The meeting was held at the residence of Mrs. Silas Alward and the programme was in charge of Rev. Canon R. A. Armstrong, the president. The programme was of exceptional interest and much enjoyed.

The arrival of quadruplets in St. John was not overlooked when the events of the year were being recalled. The first paper was given by Dr. Murray MacLaren, C. M. G., M. P., who told of the medical events, referring particularly to the discovery of insulin.

G. S. MacDonald told of the work of the archaeologists during the year, mentioning specially the Tutankhamen discoveries and the discoveries of ancient relics in Mexico. Richard Hooper told of the great development of radio. F. B. Ellis, in a paper dealt with the Ruhr situation and G. E. Barbour gave an account of the recent earthquake in Japan.

Canon Armstrong, in his paper, told of the religious developments of the year, referring to the Church Union movement, the Anglo-Catholic movement, and the Lambeth Congress.

The meeting was well attended.

Demosthenes, the foremost orator of history, was born in Athens about July in the year 385 B. C.
