SPORT NEWS OF A DAY; HOME AND ABROAD

Baseball N. B. and Maine League. It is now practically assured that the New Brunswick and Maine Baseball League will be run on much the same lines as last year. Joe Page has visited the different towns in the province and several in Maine and a meeting of managers in the Dufferin Hotel yesterday afternoon was the result. Representatives were present as follows: C. M. Aspherton and J. W. Gallagher, Woodstock; T. H. Hanson, Houlton; J. J. McCaffrey, Fredericton; D. B. Donald and H. J. Fleming, St. John. It was decided to organize a league with these four teams and the salary limit per month for each club was placed at $1,000. Visiting teams are to have the option of taking 35 p.c. of the gate receipts or a straight guarantee of $30 for each game. Each club agreed to put up a deposit of $500 to ensure the carrying out of the terms of agreement and the rules of the league. The St. John representatives are to draw up rules and submit them to the different clubs so that final arrangements can be made at a meeting which is to be held in the Queen Hotel, Fredericton, on April 29. It was decided to have two official umpires for the league and these men are to be selected by President Barrow of the International League. The St. John are to open the league here on May 24. The closing of the league is to be on September 7. St. John is to have games at home on Friday and Saturdays each week, with probably a game each Tuesday, and the local team is to play away from home two days each week. Games will be played during Old Home Week and Exhibition week. It is expected that many of the players who were in the league last year will be seen in action here again this season.

lucky abandoned his intended trip on board the ill-fated Titanic, home interests were hard hit when the giant steamship foundered last week. The National Capital Horse Show Association, whose second annual exhibition is to be held in Washington, May 1 to 4, lost two of its active officials, Clarence Moore was a member of the executive committee and Major Archibald W. Best was a member of the Horse Show committee. Mr. Moore was widely known as a horseman, having been for many years master of the Chevy Chase hounds, and a judge at numerous horse shows. George D. Widener, another of the well known horsemen lost, was a prominent exhibitor and winner in the harness and blister classes at Bryn Mawr and other eastern shows, including the New York National, at Madison Square Garden. Announcement of the Quebec race meet, August 26 to 31, is made. The races will be during the Quebec provincial exhibition. The programme so far includes: 2:35 race—$1,000. 2:50 trot—$1,000. 2:27 race—$1,000. 2:30 trot—$1,000. 2:29 race—$1,000. 2:16 race—$1,000. Aquatic Summer Events. Boston, Mass., April 22—Since Commodore T. F. Feltz, 2d of the Eastern Yacht Club, made formal announcement of the annual cruise, preparations for the coming season have been going steadily forward. The first event will be the race from Newport to Marblehead early in July, one of the most important distance races of the season. There will be three classes, one for the big schooners, one for the smaller schooners, and one for the sloops and yawls, over a course of about one hundred and fifty miles. The big schooners will race for the Gold Cup offered by Commodore F. Lewis Clark last year. This cup must be won three times by the same owner for final possession, and the Elena last year won one leg on the cup. The smaller schooners and the sloops will race for prizes presented by two other members of the club. In this race will appear such boats as the Elena, Iolita, Louisa, Sca Fox, Princess, formerly Elmina I.; Kormina, Vagabond, Silvers, Avenger, Adventure and the Acushla II. On the same day the club will hold a regatta at Marblehead for youths of not more than forty-six feet rating, and in this there will be the regular rating classes, and probably the Sanderkiss and Marblehead one design classes.

Useful Facts about Washing and Ironing

With the advent of the blouse as one of the particulars of women's dress the laundry bill has either been found swollen beyond recognition or the work in the household has enlarged. It is proper that girls who wear these pretty affairs should know how to wash and iron them, thereby saving the family pocketbook. The washing and ironing should be done in the easiest and plainest way. The washing of prints is much the same as woolens, for there is no soaking except in particular cases. The particular case is one in which there is a new waist to be washed and there is some doubt as to whether the colors are fast. When this question is uppermost seek the waist in clear, cold water, to which a handful of salt has been added. This makes the water colder and harder, and its solvent powers are not so great. Colors that have a slight tendency to "run" are easily fixed. If the blouse has been made at home a small strip of the same material can be tested before the washing is started. Have your tub ready with a warm suds bath made of melted soap in the same way that it is made for dummies. The melted soap, or soap jelly, is generally mixed with all the scrape of soap that are used for ordinary use. These are shredded down and about four ounces of soap is used to four cups of water. This is placed in an old pot or jar over the fire. The fire should be very slow. If the suds is to be used for prints, it is best to use a little of the soap jelly in a tub of warm water and raise the temperature by vigorous motion of the hands. Squeeze the blouse out in this after washing clean—having first been removed from the cold water bath. If the cuffs and neckband are much soiled a very little hard soap may be rubbed on, but not otherwise. Too hot water should be avoided, as it fades colors. If very much soiled the blouse requires only one lather, and the suds should be turned wrong side out in the first water after washing on the right side. Rinse with warm water, and then as many cold waters as needed. If the color has run even a very little put one tablespoonful of vinegar in the rinsing water, which helps to counteract the action of the alkali in the soap. It is a good plan to put colored blouses under running water. This often restores partially faded colors. Squeeze out the water, and pass through the wringer. Shake well and hang in an open place to dry. Hot water starch is the proper thing to use. Cold water starch gives prints a papery feeling and an appearance which is highly objectionable. Cold water starch must be cooked by the heat of the iron before it stiffens anything. Hot water starch, or as it ought to be called, boiling water starch, is really cooked before use. Cold water starch, being uncooked, requires an extra hot iron, and strong heat is detrimental to the colors of fabrics, there is no doubt but that hot water starch is the better. It can be made in these proportions: One heaping tablespoonful of good starch, half a teaspoonful of powdered borax, and an inch of wax, stirred into a tub of starch into a basin and add a little cold water—about two or three tablespoonfuls. The mixture should be stirred with the fingers in such a way that it is perfectly smooth and free from lumps. Then spread in the wax. This wax help to make the iron glide over the work. Pour the boiling water from the kettle, very slowly at first, mixing all the time with a wooden spoon and stop adding water when the starch becomes clear and thick. The starch has then become cooked or clear starch. Dissolve the borax in a little boiling water, and add it. The borax gives a nice finish and gloss. This starch must be thinned down considerably when used on the blouses. One measure of the starch to eight of water is about the proper proportion in which it should be used. Many housewives prefer to allow the starched articles to get quite dry, and then dampen and iron them. But done in this way they never have the same finish. Great pains should be taken to have the iron in the proper condition. In the first place they must be perfectly clean. A piece of brown paper, well soaked and sprinkled with fine lard, makes a splendid polish in which to rub them when in use. A small piece of bees' wax, tied in muslin, is excellent as a restorer to their smoothness and easy working. If laid on the range they must have a sheet of iron between them and the gas at first and until they are thoroughly heated. Then they can be heated with gas without the sheet of iron. Ironing is a process which no amount of describing will render easy or successful at all, and great care should be taken. If an iron is laid on the gas flame before it is heated the moisture condenses on its surface and makes it rusty. Other little things can be noticed in the ironing of blouses. These things can be better explained in the next time she attempts the same kind of work.

Teaching the Young Girl How to Keep House

It is the duty of every mother to see that her daughter is provided with wholesome occupation and plenty of it. For the young girl who has graduated from school, or is still there, her studies have kept her busy to a certain extent and she has not used her physical strength. The mother should attend to the latter part, so that the daughter may possess a "sound mind in a strong body" when she comes to her heritage of womanhood. The daughter should have certain duties strictly forced upon her if she is to be happy and contented. Hereafter she has studied hard and eaten without much thought, grudging the time lost in that and in sleep. This must be changed and the mother must plan to have the daughter busy during her spare hours. It is to a lack of regular occupation that unhealthiness and a restless spirit may be equally charged; the girl has no special thing that she feels must be done, so she wastes the time as best she can, and the excitement. This does not mean that the daughter must be kept away from young associates. On the contrary, youth should be sought, and if the mother is wise she will allow all the young companions. But they should be brought into the daughter's life and she should be allowed to go into theirs. At first the hands of the average girl are awkward in keeping house. She generally goes to a school where such arts are not taught and where she has learned to eat regularly, but they have to sleep with the elephants. They want all their friends to see them next Thursday and Friday, at the Queen's Rink, only they want it understood that they can't pass anybody in.
