Something New!
FOR THE FARMERS!
GEORGE Caldwell, Grain and Seed Depositor, Waterloo Square, Ont. Post Office, London, C. W. October 15 1865. This machine will drill any kind of grain and small seeds, by simply removing the Seed Box and Cover a Cultivator equal to any in use.
Perhaps there is no kind of farm work that the average farmer has more trouble to perform than sowing grain and grass seed. Many a time and oft have I seen the farmer and his boys out in the field, sowing and harrowing in, and when the work was done, the seed was all in wrong, and the crop a poor one. Then the farmer would say, "I'll never sow any more grain and grass seed in the spring, I'll sow it in the fall." Then the next fall would come, and the farmer would say, "I'll sow it in the spring, for I have had such poor luck sowing in the fall." Now, I say, sow it in the fall, and sow it with my Fall and Spring Grain Drill, and you will have no trouble. Now, farmers, I have got the best Drill in the country, and I will sell it cheap. Call and see it, and get a circular, and you will be convinced that I am telling the truth. Yours, &c.,
GEORGE CALDWELL.

PUMPS! PUMPS!

THE WIFE TO HER HUSBAND.

The following beautiful effusion is from the pen of a member of the "Society of Friends." It has won several husbands from the bar-room to their domestic hearth. May it win many more.

You took me, William, when a girl, unto your home and heart
To bear in all your after life a fond and faithful part;
And tell me, have I ever cried that duty is forgot,
O mind, thou can'st not say to me, when you were sick in cot?
No, I awoke rather share your pain than any other's gain—
For though you're nothing to the world, you're all the world to me.
You made a palace of my shed, this rough hewn couch a throne;
There's sunlight for me in your smiles, and music in your tone.
I look upon you when you sleep—my eyes with tears grow dim,
I cry, O Parent of the poor, look down from heaven on him!
Behold him toil from day to day, exhausting strength and soul;
O look with mercy on him, Lord, for thou canst make him whole!
And when at last relieving sleep has on my eyelids smiled,
How oft are they forbid to close in slumber by our child!
I trace the little murmurer that spoils my span of rest,
And feel it is a part of me, for I call mine my breast;
There's only one return I crave, I may and need it long,
And may it soothe me when I'm where the wretched feel no wrong.
I ask not for less frugal fare, if such as I have got
Suffice to make me fair to thee, for more, I murmur not.
But I would ask some share of hours which you on claim as ours,
Of knowledge which you prize so much, might I but something learn
Abstract from meetings among men, each eve or hour for me,
Make me companion of your soul, as I may safely be.
If you will read, I'll sit and work, and think when you're away
Less restless; I shall find the time, dear William, of your stay.
I meet communion soon I'll be, even of your studious hours,
And together chose little ones you call our cottage flowers.

A Golden Dead—A Tale of the Orkneys.

BY JEAN INGELOW.

Let us go back a long time and talk about things which happened before we were born—I do not mean centuries ago, when the seakings in their voyages plundering the coasts, drove by night upon the rocks and went down. That is not the long time ago of which I want to speak; nor of that long time ago when two whaling vessels, large and deeply laden, bounded against it in a storm, and beat up against it till the raging waves cast them to pieces and splitting and grinding every beam and spar scarcely threw one piece of wreck on the shore which was as long as the bodies of the mariners. I am not going to tell of the many fishing coats which went out and were seen no more—of the many brave men that, nard by the fatal place went under the surging water, of the many toiling rowers that made, alas! they thought, straight for home and struck, and rose only then to cry—The Rock! the Rock! Look! This time of which I mean to tell, was a wild night in March, during which in a fisherman's hut ashore, sat a young girl at her spinning wheel and looked out on the dark, driving clouds and listened trembling to the rain and the sea.

The morning light showed it her. One coat she should have seen, riding on the troubled waves was missing—her father's boat! and half a mile from his cottage her father's body was washed up on the shore.

This happened fifty years ago, and fifty years is a long time in the life of a human being; fifty years is a long time to go on in such a course as this woman did of whom I am speaking. One excuse her father's body according to the custom of her people. till he was laid in the grave. Then she laid down on her bed and slept, and by night got up and set a candle in the casement, as a beacon to the fishermen and a guide. She sat by the candle all night, and trimmed it, and spun; and so on day after day, and night after night, and year after year, through winter and summer, through driving mists, deceptive moonlight, and solemn darkness, the northern harbor she never slept upon without the light of the candle.

How many lives she saved by this means or how many she were not be able to say. The grateful dwellers on the bounteous land depending on the sea, seriously forth, cannot be told. There is room, indeed, as a light house always, as constant care could make it, for always brighter when daylight gained, they are only to burn down straight for that light of which I tell, and they were safe of a safe entrance into the harbor.

Fifty years of life and labor—fifty years of pleasure, in the sunshine—fifty years of watching and self denial, all to feed the flame and trim the wick—and one candle! But it is not under the compass of human man and woman and wife man few of them can show fifty years of worthier, certainly not of more successful labor. Little, indeed, is the "midnight oil" consumed during the last half century so worthily deserved the crimping. Happy women—send out for the dreaded rock her great charity might never have been called into exercise.

But what of the spinner and the boat? Is what think you? Do they live yet?

No, they are dead, poor, but rich in all they know better than the.

Do they thank her?

Perhaps they feel that thanks would be idle words, or perhaps long years have made it a familiar as the air of heaven, and as little need of
