WILL SECURE TWO MEN TO FILL BUTLER'S PLACE

One Will be Deputy Minister and Chairman of the Board and the Other Chief Engineer—Ottawa By-Action

OTTAWA, Jan. 23.—Nominations for the by-election for the Commonsense Party in Ottawa caused by the resignation of Mr. J. L. Chabot, member of the Commonsense Party, were held yesterday afternoon at the City Hall. The three candidates nominated were Mr. A. A. Alford, merchant, the straight Liberal ticket; Dr. J. L. Chabot, nominee of the Commonsense Party, and Mr. J. A. Ellis, who is running on an independent Conservative ticket with his chief plank being direct contribution by Canada to the British navy instead of the creation of a Canadian navy. All three candidates made short addresses.

Mr. M. J. Butler, the new general manager of the Steel and Coal Companies has returned to Ottawa from Sydney, C. B. He will continue his work as deputy minister for four of five weeks yet, pending the passing of the estimates for the department, and the clearing up of other matters before the department, so as to leave everything in readiness for his successor.

Mr. Butler will then leave for Sydney, where he will take up his residence permanently. Although several names have been mentioned as probable selections for the three positions of chief engineer, deputy minister and chairman for the board of management of the Intercolonial rendered vacant by Mr. Butler's resignation, no decision has been reached by the minister as to the appointments. It is practically certain, however, that two men will be chosen to fill Mr. Butler's place, one for chief engineer for the department and the other to act as deputy minister and chairman for the I. C. B. board of management.

Badge Making Concern That Supplied Discomplies Bill for Emblems Is Not Paid.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The White-Collar League, a New York organization, is about to bring suit to collect their bill of $24,000 from the badge-making concern that supplied the badges for the White-Collar League. The concern, at New York, for official medals furnished during the celebration of the League's anniversary.

Mr. William A. Jones, treasurer of the White-Collar League, yesterday displayed considerable indignation in discussing the methods of the commission in connection with its failure to pay the bill. Said he:

"We sent our bill to Mr. Hermann Hilder, secretary and executive officer of the commission, and demanded our money about two months ago. He told our representative practically that if we took ten per cent. off he would pay it at once, or else we could wait. It is well, we didn't take off a discount and we are going to get the money. This method is merely a hold-up. It is a demand for a contribution to their collection unit, we do not wish to make."

General Woodford has now gone to New York to collect the money. He is expected to return in a few days. The White-Collar League is a body of men who are not paid for their services. They are not paid for their services. They are not paid for their services.

The boy was spending money right and left among the shops of his own age, and the grandfather, John Jones, of London Township, was none the wiser.

THEY UNITE IN PROTEST AT OTTAWA

Maritime Provinces and Representation

Can't be Cut—Demand Made That the Original Number be Restored.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 23.—Members of the commonsense and senators from Maritime Provinces, both Liberal and Conservative, met in caucus on Saturday and passed a resolution declaring that members on both sides of politics from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island were united in demanding that the representation of these provinces in parliament should be maintained at the "old" number as obtained at Confederation, namely, 19 seats (Nova Scotia, 10; New Brunswick, 6; and Prince Edward Island, 3).

A committee consisting of Messrs. Warburton (Prince Edward Island), Kyles (Nova Scotia), and Dugas (New Brunswick) was appointed to wait on Sir Wilfrid Laurier and urge for the presentation of the resolution to the government.

Unless the Maritime Provinces secure an amendment to the British North America Act to give effect to their resolution their representation in the commonsense will be very considerably reduced as the result of the distribution of seats after census of the new year. Since the last census the population in the Maritime Provinces has increased by only about 120,000, whereas the population of Quebec, which decides the unit of representation, has increased by 1,200,000.

Quebec has a fixed representation under B. N. A. Act of 65 seats in the Commonsense, and according to increase in population during the decade the unit of representation after the next redistribution will be increased by nearly 300,000. On this basis the Maritime Provinces which now have 55 members in the Commonsense will lose four or five members from the present representation.

Ontario which is keeping about even with Quebec in the matter of increase in population will therefore retain practically all the present representation.

The three prairie provinces which have gained nearly 800,000 in population since 1901 will be entitled to an increase of some 17 members, seven have been already added on the basis of western census of four years ago. British Columbia which has already increased in population by about 125,000 since 1901 will be entitled to probably three additional members after the next census.

BALFOUR LIKELY TO BE IN POWER IN SIX MONTHS

LONDON, Jan. 23.—It is now confidently expected that a general election will take place within six months, when the Unionists are expected to gain a majority. A prominent Unionist forecasted the next Unionist cabinet as follows:

Walter Long; Foreign Secretary, Marquis of Lansdowne (with the lead in the House of Lords); Chancellor of the Exchequer, Rt. Hon. Austen Chamberlain; Secretary of State for India, Rt. Hon. Lord Curzon; Secretary for Ireland, Mr. Bonar Law; Solicitor General, Rt. Hon. Henry Chaplin.

SEVERAL KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Big Four Night Express Derailed—Five or Six.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 22.—Five are dead and fifteen injured as the result of the wreck of the Big Four night express from Chicago, which left the track two miles west of here this morning while running towards the city at 50 miles an hour. The dead: Frank Stadenberger, conductor, Newport, C. V.; Goldie, freeman, Indianapolis; John Stucke, Cincinnati; Fred C. Murphy, engineer, Kansas City, Kas.

Fifteen of the passengers were injured, but none seriously. While rounding a curve, the engine leaped from the track and whirling in a great semicircle plunged through a coven of its own train.

According to the Big Four officials the accident was caused by a piece of iron dropped on one of the tracks, which derailing the engine.

The liquor license commissioners will likely continue their inspection of the liquor saloons this afternoon, and it is expected that they will complete the tour tomorrow. The saloons in the North End will be the next visited. Few irregularities are expected to be found in the remaining bars. The commissioners will likely make their award on Wednesday afternoon. It is understood that very few applicants if any will be refused licenses.

GHOSTS OBJECT TO THE SMELL OF LIFE

No Pleasure to Attend Seances Because of Dislike for Humans

Humanity always says, "What a nuisance these ghosts are!" Human beings are the subject of the seances, and the seances are the subject of the seances.

Without Obnoxious Odor.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 23.—Somehow or other the ghosts have seldom met with fair play. They squeak and gibber in the Roman street, on business in moated grange and ancestral manor house they moan and creak and chain rattling and rattling in the gloom. As the White Lady of the house of Boscobel they appear in solemn warning to relatives, prices; it is their duty.

What manner of reception do they meet? Humanity always says, "What a nuisance these ghosts are!" Human beings are the subject of the seances, and the seances are the subject of the seances.

But the instinct of fairness demands the inquiry into the feelings of the ghosts. They are not to be despised. They are quite as objectionable to the deniers of the seances as they are to the believers. This only can any school of psychology give an interpretation account for the conduct of the seances when the exorcists are in the seances. The seances are the subject of the seances.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

No trouble with Sunlight Soap. Just follow the directions on the wrapper and Sunlight does the rest. Costs little—does much—never injures hands or clothes.

your club, as you would ordinarily when some stranger passes the time of day. It's sweet to be anthropomorphic, and have your dinner come to you on the hoof, and a merry night in settlement of the initial uncertainty as to whether you dine or are dined. But it proves to be a ghost who greets you and not a potential food supply.

So you and the ghost get quite chummy. No horripilation in your case for you are but a simple savage man and have not advanced beyond words of greeting, certainly not beyond two syllabled ideas. All day long you and the sociable ghost grow growing through the jungle, observing the beauties of nature and things in general.

When evening comes you turn to your home, for even if you haven't found anybody to eat, the woman will have fish and yams and bananas and coconut puddings baking in the oven, and the hot cobles will not be forked out of the smoking pit until the head of the house comes back.

In parting from the companion of your day's wanderings you find that the ghost has taken quite a fancy to you. He invites better acquaintance. "Suppose you come down with me some time," he says, "and meet the rest of the fellows."

"Fine," say you in savage courtesy. "Nothing would give me greater pleasure."

"Why not come now?" the ghost asks, and having absolutely nothing that ever really must be done from your first birthday until you become a ghost yourself, you are perfectly willing.

"First of run home and get some fish or a piece of pig," the ghost directs. "I'm not inhospitable, but living folks can't eat out stuff, and you'll have to bring your own."

So you stuff a green coconut basket with a light collation, eight or ten pounds of whatever the women have cooked. You and the friendly ghost set off together. Just where you go is not quite distinct, but it's somewhere down below the surface of things.

When you get there the other spirits have not yet come, back to the land. Your host blows up the smoking fire and bids you make yourself at home, showing you a place where you can sit and be in nobody's way, or rather in no spirit's way. Then the rest of the ghosts come trooping in from their day on the earth plane.

The open shadowy baskets of their peculiar food, the flat plates are heaped high and a pleasant spiritual feast is set before you. You, off in your corner, are gorging on pork and pudding and thinking to yourself—how much better it is to be alive.

Suddenly one of the ghosts stops eating, others look up in wild surprise, and one sniffs, and then all are sniffing the ghost house air.

"I smell a live one," squeals one of the ghosts.

"So do I," another, "so do we all."

All except your host. "Not so, brothers. Are you not here in your own ghost house in ghost land? There's no live one here, there cannot be."

"But we all smell a live one!" they cry.

"That's easy," replies your own particular ghost. "It was pretty close to the houses up above today and I must have carried away some of the live smell with me. It's pretty strong, you know."

But the other ghosts are alarmed. They refuse to be pacified by the reasonable explanation. Their eyes, dead eyes, are not good enough to see you, but their noses are keen. They smell the live one, the reek of life nauseates and frightens them. They float tumultuously away in the dark.

You are left to find your way home alone in the creepy night past strange forest figures, hearing strange jungle noises, conscious that the wandering ghosts are all about you, sniffing, ever sniffing the smell of the live one. That's the story you have to tell when at last you come within the cheery light of a real fire and friends sitting round.

The smell of life is repugnant to the ghosts.

It isn't necessary to go as far as the utmost cannibal island to learn this interesting fact in the relations of the living and the dead. What says the ogress, great giant Blunderbore?

"Fe, fi, fo, fum! I smell the blood of an Englishman."

Proof enough there in our own folklore that normal life has a distinctive smell that the abnormal has no difficulty in identifying. Jack was small in the castle at the top of the beanstalk. He was hidden from view, but the ogress sniffed him out.

Incidentally it proved rough on the ogress, but that does not mar the psychology of the matter.

There's something in the exclamation of Blunderbore which challenges remark. Every child detects at once the faintest of rhyme and instantly corrects it. Promptly he says "Englishman!" in the hope that the association will do somewhat even if the consonants are irreducible. Why not, however, correct the senseless first line?

It's sacrosanct, it's the words of might, and words are never to be altered or their virtue goes; witness abracadabra and the knock out of the pleasure formula. Just where lies the sanctity of this thaumaturgical litany no scholar has yet discovered. Maybe it inheres in the Latin inflection.

No second correction is a solemn acquisition, mastery is felt by him who for the first time has acquired the mystery of bonus, bona, bonum, with the accent all wrong.

But it is clear that if the merciful man is to be merciful to his ghost he
