Great Possibilities to Make Your Porch Cosy Little Living Room

A CUP OF TEA ON THE PORCH.

Whether you call it piazza or veranda, if it is anything larger than a yard-square "front stoop," you can transform it into that last development of the modern home, the porch parlor, or the outdoor living room. As shade and seclusion are the essentials in a comfortable outdoor sitting room, it is for them that the best expenditure is generally made. Morning glory, wild cucumber, wistaria or the fragrant white honeysuckle make ideal summer screening; and the moon flower, though its foliage is coarse and its scent is heavy, is liked for its rapid growth in sunny exposures. The old-fashioned chairs and an old sofa, long stored away in the attic, may be resurrected and brought forth to do duty once more. A few cents worth of paint on this old furniture and several cushions which nimble fingers have covered with bright-colored fabrics, will do wonders in the way of brightening up this outdoor sitting room. Women make pillow covers of everything from gray calico to burials for their porches. The discriminating, of course, choose fabrics which will not fade in the sun, such as checked ginghams, braided denims, linen crash, printed India cotton, or chintz of large design and brilliant hue. Matting and raffia make the best of porch pillows, for they can be cleaned indefinitely. Unbleached muslin, stenciled with peacocks or owls is pretty and serviceable. For the floor covering the old-fashioned rag carpet is the best of all—the newest. The "afternoon tea" table may be covered with unbleached crash embroidered in Bulgarian colors, or with the snowy hemstitched luncheon cloth which has perhaps been made from (don't tell!) the recently worn-out table cloth. The hammock, too, is indispensable, and here, again, may the gay cushions be used. A willow chair or two are useful and decorative as well. If, as is often the case, the porch is to be used as an outdoor sleeping room for baby, inclose one end with curtains of duck or denim which run smoothly on small rods. This makes a nook free from drafts on windy days, and from the heat of a mid-summer noon. And mother, too, may nap while baby is sleeping, for she knows how refreshing this outdoor rest will be for tired muscles and nerves than the stuffy bedroom. Some sleep in the open as a cure for nervous prostration, some to improve their complexions, others—just because they want to—and hold that to be reason enough.

And the summer girl. She, too, sees possibilities, for she often uses the outdoor sitting room to ensnare the unsuspecting bachelor. She crochets, for crocheting shows off her busy fingers, and while she's really idle, she looks energetic. It was a canny bachelor who discovered how canny is the summer girl when she crochets neckties of spool silk. She made them three years ago, and year before last, and last year, and she is going to crochet them all this summer, even though they can now be bought, machine made, for 50 cents a piece. "Spools of silk are round and slippery," observes this experienced gentleman. "They just naturally fall, and roll and fall again. So when a man has picked up one spool some half-dozen times, he decides to hold it to keep the thread from tangling. Then he discovers—or he may not—that he is tied. He can't drift along casually to the next girl on the resort verandah any time he wants to. He never can grasp just the psychological moment for putting that spool down!" "And before he knows it, the chances are that he has got himself tangled and tied and crocheted up with the silk for his whole long life!"

During the same period there were in 6,893 marriages here. On an average old and the brides about nineteen. This indicates that Bostonians are reverting to the early marriage ways of the first settlers. But it must be remarked in the same connection that it is the matrimonial alliances in the foreign population which has cut the age average down. City Registrar McGlenen was asked why widows started a better chance of being matrimonially sought than spinsters, and he replied: "I suppose that it illustrates the truth of the maxim, 'Knowledge is power.' A widow knows more about men and their ways, likes, dislikes, habits and dispositions than an unmarried woman. Her experience as a wife makes her more companionable, perhaps, than a spinster, and having been courted once, she may know how to make themselves more attractive to the next suitor. I have no statistics to bear on the matter, but I am under the impression that you will find a long courtship rare where a widow is involved. "A spinster may be so reserved or shy when a man comes around with his heart in his hands that the man who wants to propose gets cold feet. Many men are valier than women are supposed to be, and it is an awful shock to their vanity to get turned down on a matrimonial proposition. If they were selling goods they would come back with arguments and so forth. But when a coy woman says 'No'—and it seems to be a superstitious thing with spinsters—that they must be asked three or four times in order to show that they are not eager and could have wedded long since if they hadn't been particular—some men will quit like chlosters. They were winners but didn't know it. Widow Knows How. "Now a widow will have the man sized up for some time before he gets nerved up to ask any momentous question. Long before that she has discreetly thought out about his business, his income, his disposition, and obtained a very accurate idea as to how late he stays out nights, and the kind of a crowd he travels with. If she has made up her mind he will come up to her requirements, she will help him get his nerve up to saying what is on his mind in a hundred ways. "Half the time a spinster is afraid to get married. She has lived half her life alone and doesn't know whether she wants to make a change. She probably has among her friends married women who often say, 'My dear, but aren't you lucky to be single?' She hears a lot about the increase of divorces and perhaps she is looking out for her dear old father's home or being a foster mother to some orphan niece or nephews. There are many spinsters in Boston who are leading heroic unselfish lives that the world will never hear about. Some of them look years ago sent away men they loved because duty meant more to them than what their hearts whispered. "A widow is apt to appreciate a home of her own after having lost one. If she has to go out to work in competition with an army of other women, she is not averse, as a rule to marrying again if the man will make a good husband. Widows, too, are apt to be more careful when they marry the second time than when they wed the first time. Many of them, when their first husband dies, go to work as housekeepers for widowers with families, and in the end marry their employer.

GIRL HEROINE OF SHIPWRECK

Barkentine Good News at Mercy of Wind and Waves and Captain's Daughter Takes Turn at Oars.
 Norfolk, Va., June 9.—With a thrilling story of a long battle with a storm swept sea the shipwrecked crew of the sunken Philadelphia barkentine Good News, accompanied by a slip of a girl as the heroine has arrived here on the British steamer Metis, Philadelphia May 28, for Mobile. On June 3 the Good News ran into a violent gale off the Hatteras Capes and the barkentine sprung a leak, which was checked gingerly, but the vessel with heavy cargo quickly foundered. With no hope of saving the vessel Captain and crew lowered small boats, and while the storm was at its worst with waves dashing the dismantled rigging. Miss Erickson was swung into the Captain's boat and lowered into the turbulent sea. For three days and nights the young woman valiantly stood her turn at the oars or the rudder with the men of the crew. She was quarter-master and steward of the Captain's gig apportioning among the shipwreck the food and fresh water with which the small craft had been provisioned hastily. They were tossed and buffeted on the gale swept ocean for three days, one second in the valley of the giant waves, and the next dashing through the chilly foam crest of longer. While the Captain and his men remained here for the day Miss Erickson, who had considerably recuperated by her rest on the Metis, started for her home in Baltimore.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO REV. S. J. MACARTHUR

Newcastle Clergyman Subject of Comment by Halifax Paper—An Islander's Love of Philosophy and Literature.
 Halifax, June 9.—The Chronicle "Kodaker" today chooses as a subject, Rev. S. J. MacArthur, pastor of St. Andrew's church, Newcastle, N. B. Of Rev. Mr. MacArthur, the Chronicle says: "The comfortable town of Newcastle in the scenic north of New Brunswick is the garden that is tilled and tended by the Rev. S. J. MacArthur. Congregation and minister are well suited to each other. The people are thoughtful and of an inquiring turn of mind. The things that are of enduring value in character and conduct interest them. They are good sermon tasters. The minister, too, is thoughtful, and that above the average. He has the Islander's love of philosophy and literature. He was known as 'Kant' in his college days, so intent was he upon the search for truth in the abstract. This sobriquet places him in philosophy's service, and his name Samuel Johnson MacArthur classifies him well in the style of his speech. He is a strong preacher of a positive message. If he has had problems he has lived them down and lived them through to a solution. All his contemporaries know his worth and his work in Matfield and New Glasgow, N. S., and he is still making good in Newcastle."

Mexican Government Takes Sharp Measures to Quell Uprising—Mayor Escaped on Bicycle Dressed as Woman.
 Mexico City, June 9.—A special to El Imparcial says that the forces under Gen. Luga have advanced to Cuernavaca close to Valladolid. The main body of troops is still at Dzitza having established a base of operations there. No attack has been made as yet, the commander has decided to await the arrival of reinforcements in order that he may crush the insurgents at a blow. A reconnaissance has been made and the first rebout of the rebellion was encountered a league from Valladolid. Several persons thought to have been killed during the massacre have been found to have escaped. Among these was Mayor Hernandez, who escaped on a bicycle dressed as a woman. Vera Cruz, Mexico, June 9.—The sunboats Bravo and Zaragoza are preparing to leave for Progreso. It is reported that six hundred soldiers will leave on the Bravo and 600 on the Zaragoza today. One hundred and twenty cases of rifles and a quantity of ammunition were loaded on a steamer. Reports indicate that trouble is anticipated.

DRUDS OUTRAGE THE SPINSTERS

Knowledge is Power Proved by Statistics of Boston Marriages—Courtship Short When Widows are Concerned.
 Boston, Mass., May 9.—Marriage statistics show that widows stand a better chance of marrying in Boston than spinsters. A spinster is a maiden who has attained the age of thirty-five. Women got that name in the ancient time when a girl was supposed to sit all day at a wheel and spin. That was defunct the better chance of machines or typewriters, when a woman bookkeeper was never heard of and a department store wasn't even a dream. City Registrar McGlenen has a lot of interesting statistics on the marriage question stored away in his record tomes. They show that on the percentage basis widows have a long lead over spinsters in getting to the altar. Five hundred and eight widows were married in Boston within twelve months. Only 253 spinsters got married within the same period. It appears too, that the average Boston widower prefers a widow to a spinster when he takes a second or a third wife. Seven hundred and eight widows were married in this city within a year. Thirty-seven of them were wedded for the third time; one for the fourth time. Marry At Early Age. During the same period there were in 6,893 marriages here. On an average old and the brides about nineteen. This indicates that Bostonians are reverting to the early marriage ways of the first settlers. Francke was associated with Dr. Frederick A.
