FENIAN RAID VETERAN ON VISIT HERE

A. Fred Peters has his medal — Was member of New Brunswick Cavalry.

A. Fred Peters, a former resident of St. John, but now of Somerville, Mass., was in the city yesterday, coming here from Vancouber, Maine, where he has been spending a short holiday with friends. Mr. Peters is an old soldier, and he was greatly endeared when he saw the thousands of little boys and girls in the procession yesterday afternoon. It brought the old-time fighting blood tingling back to the veins of the old soldier. In conversation with a Standard reporter he said that for fifteen years he had been a member of the New Brunswick cavalry, and was a member of the regiment in 1886, at the time of the Fenian raid.

Mr. Peters said he had applied for his medal and only received it last month. Along with the medal he received one hundred dollars. Mr. Peters says that the medal is the best article which he possesses, and is writing a letter to the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, acknowledging the receipt of the medal and money. Mr. Peters said he would much rather have the medal than the money, for a man can spend the money, but he would never part with the medal. The old soldier proudly exhibited the medal to the reporter, and it is certainly well being proud of it. It is of silver with his name stamped round the edge. On one side is the face of the late Queen Victoria, while on the reverse side is a wreath of maple leaves and the Canadian flag.

WILLIAM J. SWETKA WRITES OF VOYAGE ON S.S. CALEDONIA

How the 26th Battalion went across the Atlantic — The routine of the voyage intimately described by St. John boy.

Private William J. Swetka, with the signalling division of the 26th New Brunswick Battalion, writing to his father, George Swetka of the Standard staff, says: "Left the armory, St. John, Saturday, June 12, at 6.45 in the evening. Arrived at wharf, where troopship Caledonia was docked at 7.30. Were quartered in the freight shed for the night, each man being served two blankets and one waterproof sheet. At five a.m. Sunday every man was ordered to fold his blankets and turn them into stores again.

"Musters were then called and every man answered. Embarkation of the men then began. The Ammunition Column from Fredericton was already aboard, having embarked Saturday morning.

"We left the wharf at St. John at 11.30 a.m. Sunday. The wharves were crowded with people down to say their last farewell to relatives and friends. The steamers and tugs in the harbor sounded their whistles and the crowd cheered. The artillery at Partridge Island also gave us a cheer as we passed.

"There was fine weather all day Sunday with the water as smooth as glass. We lounged around the decks during the day. At nine o'clock that night we in the signalling corps were told that we would have to go on duty on the bridge deck, day and night, two men shifts, four men shifts.

"Monday the weather was quite cool and cloudy. We took on a pilot outside of Halifax. One of the large guns of the battery at Port Camperdown was trained on us till they assured themselves of our identity. We entered the harbor and docked at the Intercolonial pier. Here we took on a cycle corps and heavy battery from Halifax, also howitzers and stores.

"At 8 p.m. Wicketts and I went on bridge deck. Came off duty at 12 o'clock. We left Halifax harbor at 9 a.m. Tuesday. H. M. S. Leviathan, which was in port, followed us out but did not accompany us, for we lost sight of her in a foggy time. The pilot got off outside the harbor. The sun came out in the afternoon but became foggy again and the fog horn was sounded at intervals.

"On Wednesday morning I again went on duty with Wicketts. The ship was going along smoothly. A war vessel, said to be the United States cruiser North Carolina, was sighted on starboard quarter, but she soon disappeared from sight. While down at dinner today the ship took several plunges which made some feel queer. She continued to roll all day and some were sick. Several porpoises were seen near the ship jumping out of the water.

"On Thursday the ship was rolling some and quite a few were sick. I went down to breakfast but felt kind of queer and came up again without eating. Wicketts and I went on duty at twelve o'clock. Did not eat any dinner. We sighted what we thought at first to be the smoke of a steamer, but turned out to be a three-masted schooner. The weather was fine although a little cold. In the evening I went on deck where the fellows were gathered round a piano singing old time songs. It certainly sounded grand and made you feel a little homesick.

"On Friday we woke after a rough night. Woke up about one o'clock drenched to the skin. Our port hole was open and a heavy sea broke through and drenched everything. A lot of fellows were sick. It was reported that the Construction Corps is right behind us with the Leviathan acting as convoy. Communication was kept up every half hour but we could not see the ships. Reported last night that we had passed the Mississippi. It is also said that the United States is at war which is not likely true.

"We sighted another three masted schooner. The fire horn was blown for the first time during the voyage. Everybody had to parade at his allotted place.

Saturday, June 19—I went on duty on bridge deck last night. There was a high wind blowing. Passed two steamers. We are evidently on the track of vessels now. There are seven of St. Stephen's Bible Class on board. War Wicketts, Charlie Callan, Walter Howard, Roy Pendleton, John H. Trift, George Richardson and myself. Sunday, June 20—Just after dinner a large and swift liner while passing us started after us, challenged, and we hoisted our flag and she continued on her course.

Tuesday, June 22—Had fire drill last night. Darkened steel shutters for port holes put on last night to prevent light from showing outside.

June 23—Cleaning up, preparing for going ashore tomorrow. No escort has shown up yet. British torpedo boat destroyer came up to us at 6.20 this evening. Told us to put best speed on.

June 24—Destroyer still with us close on starboard. About six o'clock passed Eddystone lighthouse. In about an hour entered Plymouth harbor. Several steamers with shells from the Bardsleyes were there. They cheered us. We were towed into the inner harbor. There are quite a few cruisers, destroyers, etc., in dock being repaired. Harbor is full of war vessels of all kinds. People waving from shore, on roofs, in yards, and cheered by all ships.

Friday, June 25—In camp, 7.30 a.m. Left dock by train yesterday. Arrived at Westchester 11.20 p.m. We are now camped at Sandringham, Kent, known as Shoreham camp. The whole second division camped here. We were the last to arrive and were reported to have been sunk with all hands.

BOATS FOUND BUT FISHERMEN STILL MISSING

Were towed into home ports yesterday—Rudder and gear gone from one.

The fishing boat owned by Walter Belding of Chance Harbor and from which William O'Neill was drowned during the heavy gale last Friday morning, was found yesterday. It was reported at Chance Harbor a couple of days ago that the boat was sighted about ten miles off Cape Spencer, and yesterday when the fishermen were out searching the boat was found in about the place she was previously reported.

Sandy Crawford and Leo Cameron were the fishermen to pick up the abandoned craft and with another boat which went out and was manned by Patrick Shean, Arthur Ready and James Hargrove, the Belding boat was towed to Chance Harbor. The boat from which Samuel Ferguson and Howard Galbraith were lost during the gale and which was towed into Dipper Harbor was taken in tow yesterday morning by two boats from Lorneville and towed to the latter port. When Ferguson went out fishing last Thursday night he had eight nets, when the abandoned boat was found two of the nets were missing. The boat's rudder was also unshipped and was found floating near the craft. It is thought that when the boat upset the rudder became unshipped.

Summer-Spoiled Skin Removed by Absorption

As undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, redness or roughness, often freckles, too, the sensible thing to do is to remove such surface. There is nothing better for this than ordinary mercurized wax, which actually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed, gently, gradually, so there's no inconvenience, no detention indoors. Spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercurized wax at the drugstore, use it for a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you, worry freckles more wrinkles. Banish them by bathing the face in a solution of powdered salicylic acid, 1 oz. dissolved in 4 pt. water. Use daily for a while this will be found wonderfully effective.
