A BEE. Written for the Carlston Place Herald. A Beal a Bee! a Bee's the thing.
Wher folks beith suld and young do sing
And dance and mak' the welkin ring. Oh ! Canada in Fall or Spring's The place for fun.

Maybap its at a Logging Bee, Or ploughing land that ye may see Stout chiels in dozens two or three, And maybe mair, Or at fa'an fences hat and goe, Pand quick repair.

To husk the corn or reap the grain, To raise a boose or dig a drain, Frae logs or stamps or useless stane, Your fields ye'd free-Or aught ye canna dae yer lane, Jist ca' a Boe,

At raising barns there's always lots O' stout-built chiels divest o' coats, Picking up logs quite free frae rots, Baith fast and frisky Stoppin' at whiles and taking lots O' beer or whiskey.

And mind ye mauna grudge the drap; Think how they wark, (for ilka chap There does his best) yin tries mayhap The rest to beat-But sometimes gets a pasty rap, Wi' foolish feat.

Besides the meat they had was saut, And gin they're dry its no their faut, To drink eauld water at each halt, And them see warm, Unless twas mixed a wee wi' maut, Twad dae them harm.

They wark a day wi' richt gude will, Until the sun's abint the hill, And never think c' standin still -Or sittin' doon, Unless it's when their wames they fill At night or noon.

While some the logs wi' oxen draw. Four chiefs, the smartest mang them a' Tak' each a corner, and then a' The rest divide, And lift the logs up for the wa' On ilka side.

A' day ye hear the axe gang chap,
The building rises stap by stap,
The the last log gets the last rap,
And aw's made snug— Then corner chiels dance on the tap, As pleased as pug.

The wark's noo done, hurrah! and then T'ae supper come these hungry men, And fill the hoose baith but and ben, Frae flore tae laft ; A stranger man tae peep in there Wad think them daft.

And soon they finish the good cheer, That is the eating part, nae fear There's plenty whiskey yet or beer, In flasks or kegs, To help them when the flure they clear To skake their legs.

It's after supper's the grand treat, For then the lassies come to meet The lade, and each wi' itching feet, Loup up to dance, The tired anes quick seize on a seat, Noo there's a chance.

They're in a hurry for the sang, Or for the cance in which they lang, Frae side to middle-For searce a "Bee" ye chance amang, But there's a fiddle.

Wi' hands a' round about they ge, Advance, retire, noo fast, noo slow; Happy as kings (in fact more so) Noucht can them ruffle, Beating the boards wi' heel and toe, And double shuffle.

As for the lassies 'od but they, Kin tell a dance tho' miles away, Whene're they hear the fiddle play. They'd dance till middle o' next day
And ne'er be tired.

Up starts a chiel his friends to show, How he can dance and beat "Jim Jrow" Or his black brither "Jim Along Joe," Gin they were by,

It'll never de to give it up so,

His battle ery.

Up jumps anither him to beat, And high he flings his frantic feet Nearly makin' baith ends meets Wi' bound and hop, Till tired out and drenched wi' sweat, He's 'bliged to stop.

Up springs a third yin, his best tries, The tither jumped but this are flies, Ye'd think he'd loup up the skies, Frae aff his pegs —

Twad mak' ane thick quicksilver lies,

In these lads' legs.

And there they dance wi' main and mich Sometimes until the mornin' light Gies warnin' that it's time and richt To stop the fun-So tho' it's morn they say gude nicht, And hame they san.

And noo ye see it's barmless fun They has at Bees when wark is done ; Ye'll scarcely ever hoor o' one Being cause of strife—And mony a lad at Bees has won His future wife.

To belp each ither thus 'tis plain, That each in turn will share the gain; Let a' gude customs then remain, On land or seas— And lang may Canada retain Her busy "Rees."

HECTOR ACKAT,

A Sketch from Denmark. The lower order of Danes will bear com-parison with that of any other country dor strength of body and brightness of mind. A Somersetshire peasant would not generally have much chance of success in a village such as we have all over Denmark, where such as we have all over Denmark, where everyone can read and write and owns a house and plot of land. It is Mr. Cobdem's Paradise realised. Some of the peasant girls are very pratty, with plain yellow hair, and rather long noses. We noticed several faces not at all unlike the Princess of Wales. The country girls set themselves off with silk hoods and bright gowns without regard to color. I have seen a yellow dress were with a Magenta Garibaldi. This last is the most favorite color of all. But the contame of the fisherwomen is far more interesting in the said Village.

THE Undersigned having retired from the Village of Lanark, containing one aere, with a good Work-shop 30z40, Dwelling House 32 42, Barn 32z42, with Stone Stable under it, and a fine Garden and bearing Orchard. If desired, a Horsepower, Turning Lather Country.

Circular Saws, Work-benches, Tools, and a fine formatity of Seasoned Lumber will be sold with the above.

ALSO 50 aeres adjoining the Town Lots in the caid Village. The country girls set themselves of with silk hoods and bright gowns without regard to color. I have seen a yellow dress worm with a Magenta Garibaldi. This last is the most favorite color of all. But the contume of the fisherwomen is far more interesting than these words.

ALSO 50 acres adjoining the Town Lots in the senders mixtures, being the genuine old Friedland contume.—Once a Week.

Sydney Smith (in his old way) tells us:

"I have lovies indesvered to write the word altipping with prints," The prints of into "stripping," and then altered it into "stripping," The fault is entirely mine. I was ifteen years at school and college. I know containing about the Romain and this Advantane, and have need a good deal about the prints of the township of Dalhousie, half of which is clear to the prints of the prints of Mrs. Neston is devoted to her duties as a wife and mother, and is apparently happy; but that bright playfalmon which meed to characterize her is gone. She looks adder and more subdued. Ah, had John Norman and poor subdued. Ah, had John Norman and less worldly in his views—how much better for her, and for himself.
