Germans at Wood.

German scientists who have investi-gated the wood of trees for use as human food to eke out the supply of ordinary breadstuffs report that wood contains large quantities of sugar, starch, and oil, and small quantities of albumen, particularly in the win-ter months. The food elements are found principally in the twigs and sapwood of the tree. The hardwoods and unlike ordinary pancakes are really valuable food. Because of their granular character they will not disorder digestion or ferment. They may be safely fed to a babe.
