SIAMESE BELIEFS.

Some Peculiar Notions of a Very Superstitious People.
 "The Siamese are a very superstitious people," says Ernest Young, author of the "Kingdom of the Yellow Rule." "They have many peculiar explanations of natural phenomena. Thunder, for instance, is 'the sky crying.' They believe that in the realms above is a horrible giant, whose wife has a violent and uncertain temper. When they quarrel the echo of his voice comes in long, rolling notes from the clouds. If he is very angry he throws his hatchet at his unruly spouse, and when this ponderous weapon strikes the floor of heaven the thunderbolt falls through and comes to earth."

"Falling stars are accounted for by the fact that the angels occasionally indulge in torch throwing at one another. When these same beings all insist upon getting into the bath at once the water splashes over the side, and it rains. The winds that sigh in the night are the voices of babies that have lost their way in their travels to the land beyond the grave."
 "When a Siamese dies he is not buried, but his corpse, fully dressed and then wrapped in a winding sheet, is placed in a sitting posture in a copper urn. A tube is placed in his mouth, and through this a mixture of quicksilver and honey is poured into the body. In this way it is kept for a long time, often for years. Eventually it is burned, and the ashes are carefully preserved. The souls of those whose bones at least are not burned are supposed to become slaves of a horrid taskmaster with a head like a dog, a human body and the temper of a fiend. He sits for all time with his feet in the fires of hell, and it is the duty of his slaves to keep these fires from growing too hot. To do this they must carry water in open wicker baskets through all eternity."

ENGINE ROOM HEROES.

Wonderful and Perilous Feats That Are Performed at Sea.

Nobody who has not been to sea can imagine all the things that can happen to a ship's machinery nor properly estimate the cleverness and ingenuity used up in repairs. The youth who leaves his shop full of wonderful and costly machines waiting for him at sea in the wonderful things that can be accomplished in time with a plain, ordinary hammer and chisel, a rather worn file and a great deal of ingenuity. I should like to have been aboard that steamer disabled in the Red sea where they took a boat davit, straightened it out in a rivet forge, made a new boiler feed pump piston rod out of it and went on again, or, better still, on the ship that lost a propeller and the end of her tail shaft off the west coast of Africa, to replace which they were obliged to move her cargo, pump her forward compartments full to sink her bow and raise her stern out of water, drag the broken shaft, several tons in weight, out through the long alley (too low and cramped to stand up in), plug up the hole behind it, drag in the spare shaft and couple it up and lower the new propeller down over the stern, all while she kicked and wallowed in a heavy sea, and finally had to lower the chief engineer over after the propeller, where he sat tied to a slingshotted making all fast and secure while the vessel jounced him up and down in the sea till he bled at the nose and ears and the crew kept the sharks at bay with pistols and boat hooks to prevent them from eating him up before he finished the job. That was a seventy-two hours in which the young and aspiring engineer might learn a host of valuable and interesting things.

Cleaved and Restored.

There is a certain lady who is addicted very strongly to the art of making up. What she does exactly is a mystery to all but herself and her maid, but the effect is precisely as if she had a thick coat of enamel or lacquer all over her face. A good deal of discussion has ensued as to whether this is renewed every day after ablutions. On this point a dear friend of hers observed: "Of course not. The expense would be enormous. Depend on it when she wants to wash she goes to some place where they clean old pictures."—London Tatler.

Natural Wonders.

"Why is a river the greatest freak of nature?"
 "Didn't know it was. Why is it?"
 "A river has a head, but no feet. Its mouth is where its feet ought to be."
 "Pretty good. A mountain is somewhat freakish also. We have all seen the foot of a mountain, but we never heard of a mountain's head."
 "That's so. Still it must have a head, for it has ears."
 "Has ears? How's that?"
 "Certainly. Did you never see a mountaineer?"

Waiting Time.

Mrs. Feedum—Why do you move so lazily? Don't you know that time and tide wait for no man?
 Tattered Tucker—Dat may be all right about tide, lady; but I'm afeared dere's a bunch of time waitin' fer me do next time I git jugged.

Bravery.

"You spoke very admirably of that man's courage."
 "Yes."
 "But he was never a soldier or a fireman or a policeman."
 "No, but he eats mushrooms that he has gathered himself."—Exchange.

Ideas are the result of thought, and such new ideas mark an epoch in the social and industrial advancement of the world.

IF IT IS NOT THE BRAIN

But the Stomach that is Responsible for that Depressing Headache—Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure it and cure it permanently.

"It hasn't enough brains to have a headache," is a term so often used that one might be led to believe head-achest are caused by the brain. But any physician will tell you that headache—the dull depressing kind that are worst of all—come from the stomach. Headaches are one of the symptoms of indigestion, and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets drive them away once and for all.
 "This is not an idle statement but something that has been proved thousands of times. Here is one of the proofs. Juliana Sandburg, of 221 John St., Hamilton, says: "For over six years I had been troubled with Dyspepsia and Headaches. Nothing I ate would agree with me and nothing I tried would cure me.
 "Acting upon the advice of others I began to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. I got relief almost at once and was soon completely cured."
 Reading of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets won't cure Dyspepsia Headaches, but using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets has never failed to do it.

For a Bee Sting.

One of the best possible remedies for a bee sting is the juice of a roasted onion. Roast the onion in the ashes if possible and squeeze the juice out, hot as can be borne, on the affected part. This simple remedy, applied in time, has been known to save life.

A hearty appetite does not always indicate a healthy condition.

It is not the quantity of food which is eaten but the quality which is assimilated, which determines the actual value of the food consumed. If the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition cannot convert the food into nourishment, and into blood, then the food is an injury instead of a benefit. For all disorders of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition, there is a certain remedy in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It removes clogging obstructions, it strengthens the nerves, nourishes the system, enriches the blood, and builds up the body. It is a flesh-forming, muscle-making preparation, making firm flesh instead of flabby fat. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whiskey or intoxicant of any kind, and is equally free from opium, cocaine and all narcotics.

A Horrible Suicide.

Suffering from toothache, a Keighley (England) tailor killed himself by crushing a redhot poker down his throat.

The Topas and the Coral.

Coral was made use of by the Romans as a protection against the evil eye, and popular superstition has credited the topas with the power of depriving boiling water of its heat.

PERMANENT MUSCULAR STRENGTH.

There is this to be borne in mind in these days when so many young men are giving so much attention to physical development, in gymnastic and athletic exercises, that there cannot be permanent muscular strength where there is not blood strength. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives blood strength, promotes digestion and assimilation, and builds up the whole system.

The pens used by the eastern nations were fashioned from reeds, which were well suited to the broad characters of the writing done with them. Specimens of these pens were found in the ruins of Pompeii.

Japan and Russia.

Within the past few months, says The Navy League Journal, the tension in the East between Japan and Russia has greatly increased, and there is some danger that Japan may be forced to take active measures to assure her position. The danger lies in the fact that, as was pointed out in a memorandum drawn up by a number of Japanese professors and presented to the Japanese Government, Japan's forces are slightly superior at this moment to the Russian, both on land and on sea, but that within the next twelve months that advantage will pass for ever from her.

The Russian fleet on the station, on which much depends at present, consists of the battleships Retvisan, Pobieda, Peresviet, Sevastopol, Poltava and Petr-ovsk, all six comparatively new ships, well armed and of the first class. The armored cruisers on the station are the Rosia and Kurik, of older pattern. There are also modern fast protected cruisers, and between twenty and thirty destroyers and torpedo boats. This fleet is therefore a very formidable one, and it has been assiduously practiced and trained—indeed, the perpetual shooting has awakened the suspicion of the Russian Government, and it is stated in confirmation of this, in Mr. Jane's new issue of his invaluable "All the World's Fighting Ships," that in the Russian navy the officers undertake the aiming of the gun, which means the suspension of many of the duties of a navy as never been seriously tested at sea, but there is every reason to think that it would account of itself. Tactics and strategy are well taught, and there is of course a proper respect for department and station staff, so that the organization is up to date. The ships are very good indeed, and reflect sound conceptions of the use of war. Under orders for the far east, as soon as they can be got ready, or in one or two cases actually on the way out, are no less than five new battleships and an armored cruiser. The battleships are the Ussuri, Barychich, Borodina, Orel and Surovov, all modern and extremely fast. The last three, the three last are still incomplete, but it is hoped that they will be got away before the outbreak of the Baltic next winter, and every nerve is being strained to attain that object. The armored cruiser, the Bazen, which is also going out, will render her superior to Japan alone; much superior to England, who has not been building up to the mark of years, and has no absolutely new battleships on the far eastern station, and not much behind the two powers named on the station.

The Japanese fleet will receive no such additions. As it stands to-day so it will stand in a year. It consists of six battleships, two of which are now growing old, and are distinctly inferior to the Russian ships in every quality. The good and modern armored cruisers, for all practical purposes as formidable as the Russian fast protected cruisers, and a large number of smaller cruisers and torpedo craft. The organization of this fleet is above reproach; there is a general staff, so that it is up to date, and not behind the times like our own naval organization; the men are well trained, and of unmatched bravery; the officers are good and of fighting stock. The whole fleet operates with zeal and enthusiasm, and if it were beaten it would fight to the very last, and give the world an example of heroism unsurpassed in any age. Yet the weakness of this people, in its financial poverty, has not reacted on the navy by diminishing the amount of armaments, or by the want of practice. Thus the temptation to Japan, great, to-day superior, to-morrow inferior, no promises, pleating astutely through the sell of diplomatic assurances, she knows that Russia wants only Manchuria, that Korea, and almost in sight of her own shores, the key of the East, is in her hands. She is to Japan a vital interest, and a clear field in dealing with her antagonist. If she should win, the progress of Russia would be checked for generations; if she lost, her national independence would be lost, or compromised for generations. The general staff has her all, everything in life that men hold dear, or of sacrifice, hence the terrible nature of her dilemma. On land she is inferior to Russia, in the fact that she possesses no cavalry worth the name, but in the total of men whom she could bring to bear she is probably superior, and in the total of men whom she could bring to bear she is probably superior, and in the total of men whom she could bring to bear she is probably superior, and in the total of men whom she could bring to bear she is probably superior.

Rockefeller is King.

In The Chicago Record-Herald Walter Wellman says:—John D. Rockefeller is now looked upon by almost everyone as the king of American finance and rail-roading. Mr. Morgan is in a second, but a very high place. During the last year the two men have virtually exchanged positions. Of course, it would be trite to say that for a long time both have done the very front rank—with-out doubt the two most powerful men in the country. The change appears here:—John D. Rockefeller was formerly comparatively inactive, content to remain in the background, a tremendous force in the management of railroads and big banks, but not personally very active in the management of his enterprises. On the other hand, Mr. Morgan, for several years a martyr of activity, his finger in almost every big pie—his master hand behind nearly all the great combinations and reorganizations—is now comparatively inactive.

How the Reporters Put it.

The British Weekly publishes another interesting paper from the Rev. R. J. Campbell, giving his impressions of America. He says:—All through the United States we have remarked the press in matters religious. Large space is devoted daily to the doings of the churches and the various philanthropic and social agencies which are under religious auspices. There is no volume labeled "Church News," as in our newspapers; such news is deemed to be of general interest, and almost every newspaper devotes a large amount of space to it. Many of the best sermons, in their Monday issues, reported in full some sermon or sermons preached the day before. There is the widest possible difference as to the tone and good taste of the reports given; the better class of daily newspapers do the thing well, others are often very objectionable. Here is a specimen of (some) western journalism, which may or may not find its parallel in the eastern States. It purports to be a description of my reception in the great Denver tent on the night of our arrival in Denver. It describes one's personal appearance, the imaginative reporter goes on to state that I have "golden hair." Perhaps the confusion as to the Bryanite controversy over the gold and silver standards was responsible for the mistake. The narrative continues:—"When the reverend gentleman rose to speak he received an ovation, etc., etc." Dr. Clark stepped forward carrying the British flag and the Stars and Stripes, and presented them to the visitor, who held them in his hand. His eyes filled with tears while the vast audience joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner to the tune of 'God Save the King.'" If these incidents were taken place it must have been when I was not there; but, then, I don't believe the reporter was there, either. If the audience had attempted to sing "The Star Spangled Banner to the tune of 'God Save the King,'" it would have been enough to make the angels weep, let alone cold-blooded men.

THE FISHER MARTEN.

Congecited, Cunning and Intelligent and Without Fear.
 The fisher marten deserves to be much better known than he generally is, if only on account of his own good opinion of himself, his wonderful cunning and shrewd intelligence.

One of the largest and handsomest of the martens, he has also agility, strength and endurance for any two of his kind put together. Measuring about three feet in length, with a slim, vigorous body, the fisher will travel enormous distances in a single night, bounding lightly up into the air, with his nose turned up in order to catch every whiff of scent, outwitting other animals and the cleverest trappers and making himself at home wherever he happens to find himself.

He generally chooses as his hunting grounds the thickly covered hills and ridges where the hemlock and spruce grow in abundance, but he is as much at home on the tree tops as on the ground and can sleep as soundly in a low hollow of a tree as on a branch of a fir tree, where he will lie stretched out in the sunshine like any old cat.

As for fear, he does not know what it is. He will not only face but actually kill a Canadian porcupine and does not even appear to mind the quills which penetrate his body. He is not particularly fond of meeting an old bear with cubs, but is generally clever enough to steal her cubs while she goes off on some little expedition of her own, while instances have been related of the fishers in the Rocky mountains even killing young grizzlies.

As for man, he appears to laugh at him and his designs for trapping wild animals. He will pull a marten trap open and take out the bait, whether alive or dead; he will tear a pine marten or mink to pieces in no time and carry it off or drag the trap over some rough projection in order to spring it and make off more often than not without having received as much as a scratch.

But perhaps his cleverest trick, when he finds a trapper is following his trail, is to get behind the trapper and follow him, so that while the unconscious trapper is walking after the fisher the fisher is keeping completely out of danger by following the trapper. Many a useless mile has the trapper walked in this manner, and many good baits has he lost by the very same shrewd, cunning animal he is trying to trace and catch.

A Lucky Game of Chess.

A story is told of the Moorish prince Abul Hejex, who was thrown into prison for sedition by his brother Mohammed, king of Granada. There he remained for several years until the king, fearing he might escape, placed himself at the head of a fresh revolt and seized the crown, ordering one of his pashas to see to his immediate execution. Abul Hejex was playing at chess when the pasha came and bade him prepare for death. The prince asked for two hours' respite, which was refused. After earnest entreaty he obtained permission to finish his game. He was in no hurry about the moves, we are told, and well for him he was not, for before an hour had elapsed a messenger brought the news that Mohammed had been struck dead by apoplexy, and Abul was forthwith proclaimed king of Granada. It was indeed a small favor for the pasha to grant, but it altered the whole current of the king's career.
