tween the men and her husband, who slept on, unconscious of the noise about him.

"No, no!" she cried tensely. "Let him alone. You shall not touch him."

In her desperation she drew from the bosom of her dress a small revolver which she carried ever since she left Paris.

"Keep away, I tell you. You shall not arrest my husband."

Dufrenne confronted her with an angry gesture.

"You fool," he cried. "Do you dare to disobey this?" He held before her eyes a silver ring, inlaid with gold, similar to the one she wore about her own neck. "I am a member of the secret police, as you know. This man is a traitor to his duty, and for that he shall be punished. Arrest him," he said again to his men.

Grace recoiled and dropped the revolver she held to the floor. In all her dread of the future, this was something upon which she had not counted. Her husband arrested, possibly shot, or condemned to spend years in some frightful military prison. She thought of Devil's Island, where Dreyfus had been confined, and the horror of the situation overcame her. Unable to resist longer, she sank upon the seat and burst into tears.

The two gendarmes awakened Duvall roughly, and after informing him that he was a prisoner, sat grimly down on either side of him. Dufrenne took the seat beside Grace. The train had again begun to move, and she realized that they were once more flying toward Paris.

At first Duvall, in his stupor of sleep, did not realize what had happened, but in a few moments he had grasped the situation. He did not seem greatly concerned at his arrest, and Grace her first paroxysm of weeping having passed, looked at him in surprise. How brave he was, she thought. Once she caught his eyes, but he made no sign. Apparently he was resigned to his fate.

Dufrenne turned to her presently.

"You, madame, are also under arrest," he remarked coldly.

"You have no right to do this thing," she exclaimed. "We have done the best we could."

"No!" cried the little old Frenchman, his bent shoulders straightening, his eyes flashing until he became a stern and vengeful figure. "No! You have not done the best you could. Brave men and brave women—die at their posts of duty. You are cowards, both of you. Had I been in your place, do you think I would have given in? Do you think I would have sold the honor of my country? Mon Dieu! It is incredible! I am a Frenchman, madame, and I have fought for France. I value my life as nothing, where her welfare is concerned. I would have died a thousand times, died as Frenchmen die, with 'Vive la France' on my lips, before I would have uttered so much as a single word."

She made no reply to this. In his anger the fragile old man seemed inspired with the very spirit of patriotism, his withered cheeks now took on new color, his sunken eyes a new brightness. She felt ashamed, not for Richard—for he had spoken only when she had forced him to do so—but for herself. The guilt was hers.

She was glad that she, too, was arrested, that she might have a chance to go before M. Lefevre and take upon her shoulders the dishonor which she knew belonged there. Silently she shrank back into her corner.

"M. Dufrenne," she heard Richard saying quietly, "be so good as to remember that it was I, not my wife, who gave the snuff-box to Hartmann. You have seen fit to place me under arrest. Very well. I will tell my story to M. Lefevre, and abide by his decision. But, meanwhile, I beg that you treat my wife with courtesy and respect. She has had a very trying and terrible experience, and I do not wonder that she is unnerved. You may not know it, monsieur, but we were married but five days ago, and this"—he glanced about the compartment with a sad smile—"this, monsieur, is our honeymoon."

The Frenchman sank back, all his anger swept away.

"It is pitiful, monsieur, pitiful," he called quietly, "but, in what I now do,

BISHOPRIC "STUCCO" BOARD

for Rough Cast
(Stucco Work)
or Cement

This board forms a background that holds Stucco or Plaster properly. Each lath is undercut in a "V" shape so that the plaster curls under and locks itself rigidly on—ensuring against any cracking or falling.

Dampness cannot penetrate because the Asphalt-Mastic backing in which the laths are imbedded is absolutely moisture and temperature proof.

Bishopric "Stucco" Board comes in sheets, four feet square, ready for use. There is no waste of material or time and its use will effect a great saving on the cement. Bishopric gives a better job at a reduced figure and brings the stucco house within reach of those who couldn't afford such work if done by old methods.

If your dealer does not handle our products, we will gladly send you a sample of Stucco Board and a booklet showing houses built with our materials, together with full details as to cost delivered at your home.
