SAW "SAFETY FIRST" FILM

C. P. R. Officials Viewed Silent Drama to Stimulate the Movement.

A realistic moving picture film in the interests of the Safety First Movement was recently displayed in a specially fitted car at Windsor Station before Vice-President Bury and a number of C. P. R. officials. The film was produced by Mr. Marcus A. Dow, general safety agent, New York Central lines, and tells the story of a railroad man Jack Foster, whose carelessness endangered the happiness of his wife and home until his friend Jim Stevens, a booster for the Safety First, convinces him by demonstrating awful examples that it is worse to gamble for life than to gamble in any other way. One man loses his leg, and other accidents are realistically portrayed in an exhibition at the Safety Rally to which Jim Stevens takes Jack Foster—such as the shophan who loses an eye through not wearing goggles, the carpenter losing a finger, while working on a buzz saw without a guard, the brakeman being run over while running between moving cars, the engineer being killed while handling the footboard of an engine in motion. Particularly impressive is the picture of a collision due to slowness in flagging.

In order to promote the Safety First Movement in Canada, Mr. Bury has secured a copy of the film, which will be offered to moving picture houses at divisional points along the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

She Gets $500 Damages.—At the St. Thomas, March 15.—At the jury Assizes here yesterday before Mr. Justice Sullivan, the jury returned a verdict for $500 damages in a breach of promise case brought by Miss Mary Schmeltz of Morrisburg against Duncan Sommers of Aird, a borough township. Plaintiff claims

Sommers had courted her for six years and had promised to marry her last fall, but ceased paying attention suddenly last summer, and since then had even declined to acknowledge the receipt of letters she has written asking for an explanation. Sommers did not defend the action.

CHILD'S TONGUE BECOMES COATED IF CONSTIPATED

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mothers! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

BEAUTIFUL DRUGS

Interesting Account of a Belgian Town
—Some Characteristics of the Inhabitants.

Bruges, with her ancient churches stopping to count. In spite of all that has been said about the unhealthiness of her trade, the Bruges lace makers look the picture of health, and few, even of the old, wear glasses. THE LACE INDUSTRY AND A LEGEND

A pretty story is told of the origin of this industry. Long ago there dwelt in the Dyver, on the maiden who was betrothed to a rich man's son. Her mother was a widow and the family were so poor that they scarcely knew how to get on. The necessities of life, so proud to tell her lover of their straits, the girl was silently praying for help as she sat with him one day in the shade of an apple-tree. Suddenly a spider's web fell unbroken into her lap. She looked at it admiringly, and the idea came to her that it would look pretty, copied in fine thread. She carried it carefully home in her handkerchief, and her lover devised some little pegs such as lace-makers use to-day to keep the ends of the cotton in order, and she set to work. First she made a veil for the statue of the Virgin; then she and her sisters made more, and soon the rich ladies at Bruges heard of this beautiful work, came to buy, and money flowed into the family coffers.

The houses that the lace-makers live in, like many others in the town, are made of a special kind of brick that mellow with age and takes on soft tones, shading from rose to deep crimson, while the windows are painted with cool green window-sashes. Artists love to paint them, as they do the still canals with their deep reflections. Little boats that may be thrown over the head in cold weather.

THE FAMOUS BELLS.
From the market place we hear the mellow notes of the carillon, and looking up, see the Gothic bell-towers, which have been rebuilt three times for three hundred years. There is a haunting sweetness about the bells that lingers in the memory long after you have left Bruges behind. Every quarter of an hour they ring out a different melody, often waking us in the night as with a wild burst of elfin glee.

The chimes are worked automatically, but on Sundays and holidays special concerts are given by the town carillonners, who hold a very honored position. The forty-nine bells were cast by Jacques du Mery in 1748, and are considered the best in the world. The big bass bell is older, however, until the year 1769 declarations of peace and war, as well as the town laws, were announced from the balcony.

This historic landmark, we stroll down one of the streets, where we notice fine brass, ivory, and china ornaments placed on little tables near the windows, where they may be admired by all, and little mirrors hung on the outside shutters, so that the inmates may watch all that passes.

There is not much traffic, though the clanging tram bell may be heard in this old-world town. More in keeping are the quaint carts, with the horse attached to a centre-pole, making the whole a very lengthy apparatus, especially when another cart is tied on the back. Labor is there economized by the thrifty Belgians, and one animal is made to draw as much as it possibly can. Besides the dog carts in general use for carrying all sorts of goods about the town, some are purely intended for pleasure purposes, with cushioned seats and tiny lamps; and it is quite common to see a substantial cart taking an airing in these, drawn by two fast-trotting dogs.

THE RELIGIOUS LIFE.
Religion enters very largely into the life of the people, and though Sunday is kept with continental gaiety, it is a holy day also. Every member of the family will in turn attend Mass, and it is not until the last service is over that the bands in the estaminets strike up lively airs and the sellers of cakes and toys station themselves at the roadside. On week-days two church bells begin calling before it is light, and continue at intervals until they close with the angelus.

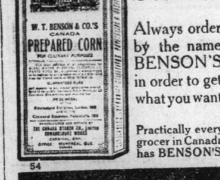

Sitting in the vast cathedral, we watch people steal in and out to pray; a group of children enter; each makes a bow to the altar, kneels for a few moments before some shrine, and departs; then a woman lifts a child to the stoop of Holy Water and makes the sign of the cross on his brow; anon a countryman, clatters in, in heavy clogs, carrying a basket, to offer a coin or a candle as a thanksgiving for a good day's business in the market.

Specially interesting is this quaint old Flemish city during Holy Week and Easter, which is kept with greater solemnity than many ancient and impressive, while the "Procession of the Holy Brood," which has been held for centuries on the Monday following the end of May, attracts not only the pilgrims from all parts of the world, but a large concourse of visitors as well. From early morn a constant stream of people pours in through the old gateways. Every house is decorated with flags, flowers, and lighted tapers, and the atmosphere is one of intense devotion and reverence by the inhabitants.

We cannot leave Bruges without mentioning the lace-makers who congregate in certain quarters of the town, where the click of their bobbins may be heard in every dwelling; and in fine weather the workers, sitting in the open air, are seen, in delicate weaving the pattern without

BENSON'S Corn Starch

Always order by the name BENSON'S in order to get what you want

Practically every grocer in Canada has BENSON'S.

He entered the political arena in 1880, and since then has been a leader, holding various portfolios, although chiefly famous as foreign minister. Viciani appointed him as head of the war ministry at the beginning of the war, but Delcasse later returned to his old office of foreign secretary. All his mature life Delcasse has hated Germany and has sought to keep alive the thirst for revenge. He imbibed part of his bitterness from Gambetta whose devoted pupil he was in his early days as a journalist. Delcasse's friends often call him "the saviour of France," because of his triumphs as foreign minister. When he assumed the portfolio for the first time in 1898 he found the republic at odds with nearly all the great powers. By a series of masterly diplomatic strokes, he restored excellent relations with all of them, and cemented the friendship of France and Russia. In 1905, when Germany and France were at loggerheads over Morocco, the German government forced him to resign by threatening war if he remained in the cabinet.

Older and Ineligible Men Will Urge Eligibles to Join.

Stratford, March 15.—At a conference last night of business men, manufacturers, clergymen and military officers, the recruiting situation was thoroughly gone into, and it was decided to have older ineligible men make a systematic effort to influence eligibles to add the needed four hundred men to the 110th Perth Battalion. To this end a canvass will be made of eligible young men in this city, whose names will be submitted to a public meeting to be called at the conclusion of the campaign. A committee was named to prosecute the canvass as follows: Major Johnson, Major Money and Capt. McKinnon for the battalion; H. H. Strudley and Ald. D. M. Wigg, representing the manufacturers; Ald. Ferguson and Angus McDonald the merchants; R. T. Mussen the professional men, and Rev. Dr. Hughson the Ministerial Association. The city will be divided into blocks, and a register taken by volunteer citizens forthwith.
