The players appearing in "Hearts of the World" are not selected because of their reputations in the world of stardom, but each and every one has been selected to fill the role for which he or she is best suited. Robert Harron, one of the stars on "Intolerance," fills the leading male role, while Lillean Gish, the Elsie Stoneman of "The Birth of a Nation" appears opposite him. Her sister, borned the screen has yet brought forth, that of The Little Disturber, a French gamin, brazen of bearing but golden of heart. The other members of the cast fill their roles no less acceptably in every instance, the performance of Robert Anderson, as "M'Sieur Cuckoo," providing comedy that is seldom devoid of genuine pathos.

"Hearts of the World" is the at-pathos.

"Hearts of the World" is the attraction at the Grand again to-night, to-morrow and Thursday.
