TOMATO PLANTFOOD REQUIRE-

To do its best the tomato requires a plentiful supply of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. Nitrogen produces leaf and stalk growth and is vitally concerned with the yield of fruit. Where leaf growth is deficient, more nitrogen should be used in the fertilizer. If, on the other hand, a good crop of clover has been turned under, the amount of nitrogen in the fertilizer is sufficient. Early varieties require more nitrogen than late varieties, since early vigorous growth must be made in cool weather.

Phosphoric acid leads to early ma-must be made in cool weather.

Phosphoric acid leads to early maturity and good quality of fruit.

Available phosphoric acid is especially important in growing early market tomatoes where a few days' difference in maturity means the difference between a high and a low price. The West Virginia Experiment Station has shown that tomatoes respond wonderfully where available phosphoric acid is liberally used.

Phosphoric acid in the fertilizer

Phosphoric acid in the fertilizer also increases the yield of the succeeding wheat crop. Potash is necessary to produce good, sound, well colored, better shipping fruit and to make the kine resistent to disease. Fertilizers give a quick start, insure quality fruit, early maturity, increased yields and profits.

Cards of Thanks

The following expression of appreciation from Mr. Wm. Landon. This is the best evidence of the results attained from a policy with The Imperial Life Assurance Company:

Mr. A. Donaldson, District Manager, Imperial Life Assurance Company: Dear Sir-I desire to thank you for your company's chemic in settlement of my 20 pay life policy which covers a return of all the money I paid in and dividends amounting to 6½% on all the premiums naid. The settlement is very gratifying indeed. The results attained under my policy and the courteous treatment me have been eminently eminently satisfac-

I congratulate your company on its careful and economic management, which accounts for the very liberal dividends you are paying, Your truly,
