Shop, which is billed for Monday ing at the Opera House : nee as w "Little Nell and the oness" at the Grand Opera House. Harry P. Mawson, in his dramatization of the novel, has evolved a most entertaining presentation. Particular attention has en paid to the scenery, and the electric light effects are brought out with great cleverness. The principals in the cast are Mr. Richard Swiveller.....Max Figman Grandfather Trent John Jack... Fred Trent, his grandson. Harold Hartsell

Mrs. Jarley, "Jarley's Waxworks,"... Landlady of "The Three Jolly Sandboys".

Mr. Figman is a good Dick Swiveller, an provoked much merriment because of his drollery and good nature.

Mr. John Jack is ideal in the role allotted to him.

Kit Nubbles was cleverly represented. so were Mr. Garland, the Landiady and Mrs Jarley. Sampson Brass had a good representative in Mr. Chas. Stanley, and the other support was efficient.

In the hideous portrayal of Daniel Quilp Mr. Anderson proved himself one of the best actors that have appeared here this

The character of Sally Brass is another unpleasant one, and it is difficult to believe that the coarseness and roughness im parted to it by Miss Caverly was a correct representation of Dickens' idea.

The star of the cast is Mary Sanders, who, in the dual role, presented two kinds of human nature with a perfection truly astonishing. The death scene was particularly touching, while in the opposite character of the hoydenish scullery maid, sharp as a-needle and true as steel, Miss Sanders was thoroughly at home, both in the humorous and pathetic pussages demanded.

The third act developed the best work, closing with the death of Little Nell, in which the scene was a well nigh perfect exhibition of melodramatic art. Altogether the company is worthy of the largest

His wonderful erformance delighted everybody and each act was greeted with rounds of applause He did many things that might well be con-

The occassion was a dance given by the Victoria-O. A. C. Hockey Club, and the committee are to be congratulated on what was certainly a very jolly affair. The music by Thain's orchestra was very inspiring, and many of the waltzes and two steps were encored, the gay throng thoroughly enjoying the first and only dancing event of the season, Amidst such a galaxy of fair, sweet maidens, perhaps the most admired were Miss Grace Howitt, Miss Powell, Miss Campbell and Miss Marcon, all becomingly gowned in pretty, smart frocks. The refreshments provided by the ladies were, as always, very delicious, and an altogether successful evening was the gratifying result of the energy and efforts of the Victoria Hockey

The treatment of Rheumatism, particularly of the chronic form, is often far from satisfactory, either to the patient of to the physican and up to the present time has left much to be desired. Even in the most favorable cases, when the worst of the disease is past there often remains a tenderness and a stiffaces about the articulations which are a incovenience to patient, if not a source of positive discomfort. Remembering the Physiological properties of intense heat, we must readily see that an hour's treatment of the affocted joints at hour's treatment of the affocted joints at a temperature of only 550 F. must necessarily reduce the inflammatory process and relieve pain.

Of course constitutional and anti-rheumatic treatment should be practiced in addition, to prevent a metostatic spread of the disease which has been a main characteristic feature of acute articular rheumatism.
