THE WAR WITH RUSSIA.
SURRENDER OF THE RUSSIAS AT EUPATORIL.

The Thubor, which left Constantinople on the 29th Sept, has arrived with news that the steamer Ajaccio reached Constantinople on the 16th from the Crimes. She left the allied troops preparing to march against the Russian army before Sebastopol.

The Russians, only 25,000 strong, expected reinforcements of 15,000.

It was thought, that a battle would be fought on the 20th, before the arrival of the Russian reinforcements. The weather was magnificant.

Not a single accident had delayed the landing of the troops and material.

The population were well disposed towards the allies, and offered them the means of transport and provisions.

At Eupatoria 400 Russians surrendered on the first summons.

At Burlnik several Russian spics were shot.

THE CRIMEA.

From the European Times.

The latest intelligence from the Crimea states that a battle was expected to be fought on the 20th instant between the allies and the Russians, and every hour may bring the result of this decisive engagement. The force of the later in the Crimea is stated to be only 25,000 men, but they expected reinforcements of 15,000 more,—a body of troops totally unable to cope with the splendid army which is now in the immediate vicinity of the great Russian fortress. The population were said to be extremely well disposed towards the invaders, whom they regard in the character of deliverers. They had afforded the new consers the means of transport and the use of provisions. A deputation of submission and obedience from the native population had appeared in the allied camp—an important fact, as showing that the work of the invaders will be comparatively easy. The iron rule which Russia has always applied to her outlying provinces brings retributive punishment at a moment like this—the turning pont in a nation's history; and it is quite in the nature of things, and indeed savours of poetic justice, that the oppressed Tartar population should receive with open arms as deliverers the mature of things, and indeed savours of poetic justice, that the oppressed Tartar population should receive with open arms as deliverers the mature of things, and indeed savours of poetic justice, that the oppressed Tartar population should receive with open arms as deliverers the which, by reference to a map of the Crimes, with the found to be about twenty miles to the north of Sebastopol. All the accounts agree in stating, that there was not a single accident, nor the loss of a single life, in the landing of the troops so of a single life, in the landing of the troops so inccessfully disembarked. Nothing can place the feeth material,—the best anguly of the provisions of the arrival of the receive, but it may be fairly a

In return for the compliment lately paid by England to her ally, by christening a man of-war France, it is intended to prefix the word Grande to the Bretagne, now building at Brest, a war-steamer of 1200 horse-power, which will, when finished, be the facest ship in the whole French navy.
