How First Aid Helped.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

One of those temperamental objectors who conceive it to be their function, in any crisis, to sit back and criticize the efforts of the rest of the world toward helping, was telling me the other day how foolish she thought it was for so many women to rush in and take courses in first aid and dietetics and so forth.

“There isn't one in ten who will ever be called on to do anything of that sort in this war,” she said. “It's all nonsense. They are just hysterical. A waste of time, I call it. I hate to see people go off the handle that way.”

She Will Never Go Off The Handle That Way.

(No one will ever see her go off the handle in a desire to help. She is perfectly safe there.)

Now, as to whether more than one out of ten of those women will be able to use in war service the knowledge they have acquired, I do not feel wise enough to prophesy.

A Privilege To Know Such Women.

But, just the same, I'm proud of my countrywomen. Proud that they were “hysterical” enough to want to give their time on the bare chance of being useful. When I think of the busy housewives and hard working clerks in my acquaintance, who gave of their few leisure hours to such preparation, I count it a privilege to know women who are capable of going off the handle in that way.

And as for the effort being wasted—was ever any added knowledge useless?

Why I Feel So Deeply.

Let me tell you a little story which will explain why I feel most deeply on this subject.

A very near and dear elderly relative of mine was boarding, last winter. One evening she was taken ill with a chill, nausea and fever. The woman with whom she was boarding had taken first aid. She recognized the symptoms, gave her guest a mustard footbath, then popped her into bed and sent for the doctor (though she herself wanted to wait until morning). The doctor threw open the windows, left word to keep careful watch, and came again the next morning. He then declared that the hostess of the boarding house had unquestionably saved his patient from an attack of pneumonia.

And that's what first aid did for me.

I expected it would be serious—I rubbed it with MINARD'S LINIMENT, which stopped the pain and reduced the swelling very quickly. I cannot speak too highly of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

A dainty bassinet for the new baby may be made from an ordinary clothes basket. It pays to get a good quality of wicker for the handles give way is apt to come to grief. Select a good size, large enough to accommodate an ordinary bed pillow fitted snugly in for a mattress. The sides of the basket should rise high enough above the pillow on the sides to keep the baby safely in his bed.

Line the basket with double layers of cotton wadding, and after basting this in place, cover it with satin or cambric lining. The bottom of the basket should be put in last to cover the rough edges of the sides.

Now the basket is ready for the third and last covering, which may be of sheer muslin or plain net shirred with a beading along the top to hide the top edge of the basket.

The pillow should have its ordinary white linen or cotton slip, which can be removed every day when the pillow is put out to air. A rubber and quilted mat will protect the pillow and all can be frequently lifted and removed.

The advantage of such a basket is that baby is protected from draft and yet it is easy to carry from one room to another. The basket is better left uncovered because it would soon get musty.

Our Daily Story.

ONLY 920.

The Kaiser was eating a sauerkraut pie in his field tent, but by the drooping tips of his sensitive military mustache his aide-de-camp saw that he was not enjoying his favorite dessert.

“The verplottesten (damned) Americans!” he grumbled savagely. “It's underunkelstolz (utterly ridiculous) that our men can do nothing with the miserable cowardly untrained upstarts!”

General Augenblitz goose-stepped in and saluted.

“Your excellency,” he reported, “I have the honor to bring the news that our men have taken forty American prisoners.”

“Bickenfutz!” (Bully!) cried the Kaiser, and summoned an orderly. “Telegraph to Berlin my command that all the school children be given a day's holiday to commemorate the occasion!”

And he turned again to General Augenblitz, the ends of his sensitive mustache now standing as erect and stiff as ramrods.

“Forty, you say? Forty?” he asked, rubbing his hands.

“Forty, your excellency,” replied Augenblitz.

“And did they do any damage while they were being captured? Did they account for any of our men?” pursued the Kaiser.

“Only 920, your excellency,” said Augenblitz proudly.

With a howl of anguish, and his mustache ends pointing straight down, the Kaiser commanded General Augenblitz to go a whole week without mustard on his sausages, and sent a counter-order to Berlin commanding that all the children be soundly whipped and detained an hour after school.

“I have been given a letter of introduction to a man in a strange city. Just how should I present it?” asked Jane.

“Mail the letter to the man, along with your card. He will then respond with a call at the earliest possible moment,” answered her friend.

BEAUTY OF THE NOSE.

Noses have much to do with beauty, and also serve to stamp the owner with certain attributes of character. Whenever a roman nose is seen one can be positive that its owner is full of enterprise and will make a success of herself, if it is humanely possible. When a ridge is seen in the center of a nose, its possessor will be found moderate and inclined to fight the battles of other people.

When the bridge of the nose is thin, know that whether you have much or little money, you will be inclined to spend all you have, unless you have the will to fight against fate and become a woman of miserly tendencies.

The Grecian nose which knows not the meaning of the word ridge, only belongs to those who are artistic and refined. While they may not possess quite enough stamina to make a financial success in life, they are always to be admired. No longer was when you survey the wide tip of your nose, as it means that you are of a true and confidential nature and this is nothing to be ashamed of.

I think most people know that the nose with the pointed tip belongs only to those women who are possessed of a reserved and cautious temperament. When, in addition, it droops slightly, suspicion and love of intrigue are indicated.

WINNING THE WAR.

you'd ortn't. Your pitiful talk of politics, of offices you're seeking, of vote machines and campaign tricks, with selfishness is reeking. You talk of art and books and song, but silence would be wiser until we right the world's great wrong and can the killing Kaiser. Of margin, profit, cost and price, the man of commerce chatters, but all such doodads cut no ice—the war is all that matters. Do you still chase the sordid ven wherever you may find it, while war is eating living men, and striding bones behind it? Are you for foolish games and sports with fiery zeal a-tremble, while in Valhalla's silent courts the murdered hosts assemble? So long as Prussian eagles scream, and kultur blasts and shatters, there's only one important theme, and war is all that matters.

A Nickel Book.

The paper question, which is adding so many grey hairs to the heads of editors, would be solved once and for all if Mr. Thomas Alva Edison perfected an invention he hinted at some years ago.

“Nickel,” he declared, “will absorb printer's ink, and a sheet of it, one twenty-thousandth of an inch thick, is cheaper, tougher, and more flexible than an ordinary sheet of newspaper.”

Why not, then, he asked, substitute nickel for paper? A nickel book, two inches thick would contain 40,000 pages—the whole of the “Encyclopaedia Britannica”—and only weigh a pound.

“I can make a pound of nickel sheets,” he added, “for five shillings.”—Ex.

Owing to the collapse in Russia, which allowed Germany to remove the main part of her Army from the Eastern to the Western front, the Allies have been severely handicapped in meeting the greatest offensive of the war.

There is an urgent call to all parts of the Empire for men.

In the United Kingdom steps are being taken to conscript all men up to the age of 51 years.

As a self-governing Dominion Newfoundland has been called upon to do her part in filling the gaps. We have been specially called upon by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to keep the Royal Newfoundland Regiment at its full war strength.

Three hundred men (300) are required immediately and sixty (60) men additional per month. The need for these men is set forth in the despatch received Tuesday, April 9th, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, which reads as follows:—

“April 9th.—Statement has been received from Army Council to the effect that the Newfoundland Regiment in France is now short of the authorized War Establishment by 170 men, and that the number of men under training in England is not sufficient to make up this deficit. Since very heavy fighting must be anticipated, at least 300 men will be required from Newfoundland as early as possible in order to bring the Battalion up to strength and the additional sixty men per month will be required to maintain it in the field.”

H. M. Government trust that your Government will be able to supply these men.

(Signed) LONG.”

Conscription prevails throughout Canada and the United States, and Newfoundlanders in Canada are being conscripted.

Under the War Measures Act the Newfoundland Government have ordered—

That no unmarried man between the ages of twenty and thirty-five, who is eligible for the Army or Navy, shall be permitted to leave the Dominion.

That no person whose ever shall be allowed to leave the Dominion without a Passport.

Newfoundland must do its part, and cost what it will, the Regiment must be maintained. Our Regiment has performed deeds of valor equal to any in the history of the British Army.

His gallantry in the field has won the recognition of the King by the bestowal of the glorious prefix “ROYAL.”

It has earned so many encomiums from the Commander in Chief, the Divisional and Brigade Generals, that we cannot allow it to be withdrawn from the scene of conflict.

It has placed the name of Newfoundland on the Honour Roll of the nations. It would be an eternal disgrace to the eligible men of Newfoundland to allow the name to be erased from that Honour Roll by failing to keep the Regiment up to its full fighting strength.

An opportunity is now afforded the young men of the country to join the ranks.

On St. George's Day, the 23rd April, the Legislature will be convened, and immediate attention will be given to the consideration of the steps to be taken to maintain the Royal Newfoundland Regiment at full war strength.

In the meantime the need is urgent, and every effort should be made to answer the call from His Excellency the Governor and from the War Council, to enlist as many men as possible.
