

"MORE THAN SUCCESS."

How Gladstone Views the Late Liberal Gains.

All-England Conference of Irish Nationalists.

Alleged Secret Agreement Between Gladstone and Parnell.

A Rush for the New French Estates—Suicide of a Ruined Russian Nobleman at Monte Carlo—Guatemala Getting Ready for a Revolution.

DUBLIN, Jan. 12.—Parnell, before starting for Limerick, made an address to a large crowd who stood on the platform of the railway station. He said he would do nothing to impede the success of the movement to secure Irish independence, but on the contrary would do everything possible to further the Irish cause. He declared he would stand by the position he had assumed in the committee room of the House of Commons, when he announced he was willing to sacrifice himself provided he saw the Irish cause and the Irish people were benefited. He said that at the time of the late election he had heard Gladstone give a speech to the crowd from a window. He criticized the attitude of the priest in regard to the present crisis. He declared that while he was not permitted to say to what length he and Mr. O'Brien had traveled together at Boulogne, he might tell them without any breach of confidence that he himself was perfectly satisfied with the results of the conference.

July 20,000 persons assembled at Limerick to greet Mr. Parnell. In response to addresses Mr. Parnell made a long speech. He held that Mr. Gladstone had caused the present trouble by issuing a mandatory letter demanding that the Irish members of the House of Commons should support the Government. He declared that the accuracy of his statements regarding the interview at Havard, Mr. Parnell declared that he could confirm their truth by a letter written March 18, only three months after the interview, when the matter was fresh in his mind, and when even his bitterest enemy could not say he had any reason to misrepresent or suppress the truth. The letter was sent to Cecil Rhodes, Premier of the Cape of Good Hope, an adherent of the cause of home rule, who stated that Mr. Gladstone had been considering fully the question of the retention of the Irish members at Westminster, and that Mr. Gladstone had told him that the retention of 33 members in the Imperial Parliament had finally been considered best for all purposes. Mr. Parnell here read the letter, proving that Gladstone's statement he sent to Mr. Rhodes corresponded with assertions in his manifesto which Mr. Gladstone had contradicted. He then proceeded to say that Mr. Gladstone pointed to his own public declarations, but it was so difficult to make anything out of these, Mr. Gladstone possessing a "marvelous facility" in placing a different interpretation upon any statement from that placed upon it by his opponents. Mr. O'Brien, to whom he (Parnell) had communicated an outline of the Havard conversation, had a remembrance absolutely identical with his own regarding Mr. Gladstone's proposal as to the number of members to be retained. Another important fact yet unrevealed, Mr. Parnell said he would now publish. Twenty-four hours before issuing his manifesto he saw Mr. McCarthy, to whom he told what he intended to do, and gave an outline of the statement he was preparing to issue as a manifesto. Mr. McCarthy, he had reason to know, placed his intentions before Mr. Gladstone. (Hear, hear.) Mr. McCarthy also communicated to him Mr. Gladstone's observations upon the outline of the manifesto, and that it showed the position of the land question. Mr. Parnell said he thought the action of the Liberals toward the land bill proposed by the Government was foolish and that it showed that the Liberals had no genuine land policy. The leaders of the party, in order to conciliate the Radical section, had abandoned the idea of a peasant proprietary and land purchase, and in order to conciliate the Whigs they had refused to entertain a proposal for a reduction of rents by means of amendments to the Land Act of 1881, or by conferring upon the future Irish Parliament the power to deal with the question. It was therefore perfectly useless for the Liberals to talk about home rule at all, because home rule, so restricted, instead of being a source of strength, prosperity, peace and freedom for the country, would in reality be a sham, landing them in hotter water than they were in at present. Whatever might be the motives of the Irish members of Parliament who opposed him, it was certain that they were not in a position by their knowledge of these affairs to sit in judgment on him or to pretend to express the opinion of the country. It was ever to be regretted that their blind haste to obey their own leaders had impelled them to press forward to a decision in the committee room as if the minutes were golden. Many of them must wish that they had paused at that time instead of sending misleading cable dispatches across the Atlantic. (Hear, hear.) He wished that they had paused to await the return of Mr. O'Brien, whose advice and judgment would have been esteemed and respected by him as it would have been compulsory for them. (Cheers.) Perhaps they might soon be able to say that it was better late than never. (Cries of "Hear, hear," and "cheers.") Mr. Parnell said he could not forecast the result of the present negotiations without a breach of confidence. He thought, however, that Mr. O'Brien would not object to his saying that so far the negotiations had resulted in an agreement, and that they fully recognized that further steps will have to be taken by other men, upon whom a very great responsibility will rest. If Mr. O'Brien and himself are not again able to resume negotiations with the assured hope of success. (Cheers.) As for himself he only asked them to believe that he had not been actuated by the contemptible and paltry motives attributed to him. As soon as the future of the Irish question was secured he would cheerfully retire from the leadership of the Irish party. (Cries of "No, no.") He should scarcely be asked to lead the party composed as it was at present. (Hear, hear.) He believed the future would vindicate him fully, but he certainly would never seek vindication beyond the voice of the Irish people. (Cheers.)

An Animated Debate.
BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, Jan. 10.—After supper last evening, Messrs. McCarthy, Sexton and Condon had a long conference with Mr. O'Brien. The conference lasted until 4 o'clock this morning, and was very animated. The conference will be resumed to-day.

The loan amounts to $69,000,000 francs.

During the battle 400 natives were killed or wounded, and 500 natives engaged. On the French side 51 native soldiers were killed and several were dangerously wounded.

Getting Ready for a Row.
SAN JUAN, Nicaragua, Jan. 10.—The Guatemalan Government has sent a representative to Mexico to purchase 4,000 horses for the organization of a cavalry force. They had communicated an outline of the Havard conversation, had a remembrance absolutely identical with his own regarding Mr. Gladstone's proposal as to the number of members to be retained. Another important fact yet unrevealed, Mr. Parnell said he would now publish. Parliamentary Statements Contradicted.
LONDON, Jan. 12.—The Daily News declares that Parnell's assertions in his speech at Limerick in regard to the letter sent by him to Cecil Rhodes were incorrect. The letter to Mr. Rhodes, it says, was written in 1888, and therefore, before the matter at issue. Regarding Mr. O'Brien the News says: "With the best intentions in the world he has played Parnell's game. A few more services of the same kind and Mr. O'Brien may return to Ireland without the danger of being arrested." Mr. Parnell's concluding offer to reopen negotiations already finally closed.

Thirteen Drowned.
LONDON, Jan. 12.—The steamer Britannia, from Leith, came into collision with the steamer Bear, from Glasgow, in the Frith of Forth, Scotland, at an early hour Sunday morning. The Bear sank immediately, her crew having no time to make any effort whatever to save themselves. Of the fourteen men on board the Bear twelve went down with the vessel. The two others were rescued. After the collision the Britannia, which was badly damaged, transferred 45 passengers to the steamer Thames, and was then taken in tow by that vessel, the steamer proceeding slowly in the direction of Leith. They had not gone far, however, before the hawser connecting the vessel was snapped asunder, and before another line could be carried to the damaged vessel, she gave a terrific plunge and sank beneath the waves. Fortunately the crew had put on life belts after the collision with the Bear, and all with the exception of the chief engineer managed to keep afloat until they were picked up by boats from the steamer Thames. The chief engineer went down with the vessel, and nothing was seen of him again.

A Letter from Gladstone.
LONDON, Jan. 10.—Mr. Gladstone has written to Mr. Parnell, Liberal candidate for Harlepool, to succeed the late Thomas Richardson. Mr. Gladstone says the Irish Parliamentary party has vindicated itself by putting an end to the leadership of Parnell and has left us prepared to denounce unequal laws and the odious system of coercion adopted by the Government as a permanent law. The Liberal party has been constantly repeated during the last four years mean much more than success. They mean that the party has declared that a union has for the first time been effected between the British and Irish, and shows that the people aimed to close the controversy. Opponents seek to indefinitely postpone at the cost of the national reputation and of imperial treasure and amid inextinguishable discord. The people of Ireland have put their trust in the people of Great Britain to deliver them from bad laws made worse by a harsh, unsympathetic administration. It rests on each constituency to show the nation that its confidence is not misplaced in vain. The views of the Liberal party on general legislation were expressed at a recent meeting of the Federated Union. They show that the party longs for the time when the Irish question will be settled and when a fuller opportunity will be afforded to other questions. Still the time will come, and we ought to supply a sample of our practical intention by a bill clearing away obstacles hindering qualified voters from coming to register and limiting on the register every single citizen to a single vote."

BADLY RATTLED.
An Explosion That Was Mistaken for an Earthquake—Miserable Forest Destroyed by the Shock.

TOLDO, Jan. 10.—The magazine of the Bradford Nitro-glycerine Company located between Prairie depot and Badger, Wood county, 25 miles south of Toledo, exploded yesterday with an effect that was mistaken for an earthquake shock. No one was near the magazine at the time. The force of the explosion was so terrific that the trees over many farms were broken and the ground is torn up for half a mile on every side of the yawning chasm which now occupies the site of the magazine. The scattered farmhouses in the neighborhood had their windows broken.

Business Across the Border.
NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Special telegrams to Bradstreet's show that there has been as yet no general revival from the period of excessive activity in the money market of the new year. The exceptions have been at Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and San Francisco, where the revival of the demand in leading lines has given rise to decidedly more activity relatively than has been observed elsewhere. There is a better feeling in wool, but woolen goods are depressed. Groceries, notably coffee and tea, are firmer. Lumber is weak and dull at the West. Hides are firmer. Receipts of cattle at primary markets are heavy. At the east wheat has gone off 10c per bushel on unexpected continued increases from week to week of available stocks of wheat, weaker cables and freer selling. Supplies increased 647,000 bushels in six of the Rockies last week, and the outlook is for another material increase this week. Exports of wheat and flour from both coasts of the United States and Canada for the week ending Thursday night equaled 2,076,000 bushels, against 1,031,000 bushels in the preceding week, and 2,317,000 bushels in the week ending Jan. 9, 1890. London, Melbourne and Adelaide are giving totals of available supplies of wheat in Europe, Australia and New Zealand, figures a total which, added to domestic and Canadian available stocks (both coasts) indicates a total for Jan. 1, 1891, of 115,000,000 bushels, as compared with 120,000,000 bushels one year ago, and 133,000,000 bushels on Jan. 1, 1889.

Business Failures Reported Number 391 in the United States this week, against 303 last week, and 350 this week last year. Canada had 43 this week, against 21 last week. The total number of failures in the United States, Jan. 1 to date, is 557, against 663 two first weeks of last year.

Please send the mounted police at once. I investigated to-day. They must be removed." TUGS, GARDENERS, Sheriff.

Commissioner Herchmer, head of the mounted police, is now in Southern Manitoba watching the situation on the reservation. He will undoubtedly be sent there to restrain the Indians from going on the warpath. They only number some 25 or 30 braves.

THE CATTLE INQUIRY.
MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—The cattle inquiry was concluded here Saturday. It is generally felt that the investigation has been productive of good, and even if it has not proved that the cattle have been subjected to cruel treatment, the fact that the men have endured hardships that must be remedied. The conduct of Mr. Plimms is adversely commented on, as he treated the whole affair with contempt, and even refused to retract the statements made in his book, which were proved to be erroneous and calculated to damage the trade.
