Mr. Hockaberry was chopping down a tree in his yard, when the axe slipped, and the sharp blade sank deep into his foot. An artery was severed, and the wound bled profusely. Fortunately for Mr. Hockaberry, a farmer happened to be going by, and with great presence of mind he ran and jumped into the wagon and the farmer drove with all speed to Victoria Hospital. Mr. Hockaberry lost considerable blood on the way, and was very weak when he was taken in hand by the house surgeons. His wound was stopped. It is feared that blood poisoning may develop, but otherwise Mr. Hockaberry will be all right again

TO BE IMPROVED

The congregation of All Saints' Church will in the near future make a number of improvements to the interior of the edifice, which, it is thought, will place it above all others in the city.

Two large slabs will be placed on either side of the church, in which are carved the ten commandments. Two marble figures are to be among the improvements, and the church board is merely waiting for the plans before commencing the work. The models of the figures, which represent angels kneeling, are being taken from one of the old cathedrals in England, and the sketches are expected to arrive in this 'city this The sketches are being proweek. cured from an artist, whose orders are to reproduce the originals.
